In Loving Memory

One year ago June 1st, our mother's beautiful heart stopped. She was truly what every mother should be. Teaching us with her examples, what we should strive to be. How many people can say they had a true angel in their lives. We can, "our mother" We love and miss you.

Thank you for your nation-wide growing business.

A big thank you to all Bird City Cardinals who helped make a wonderful weekend of returning to the cardinal nest. A weekend of remembering. We had fun making it possible with team effort and much elbow grease. It happened by the honor classes 1933, 1943, 1953, 1963 and 1973. Last days of school—

SIXTH GRADERS earned a banana split for good behavior. It was made up of three gallons of ice-cream, a huge bunch of bananas, several toppings resulting in sour stomach aches.

ZACH BISHOP, Joey McCormick, Adam Orten, Megan Els, and Caleb Fruik recieved a reward of ice-cream floats for earning a grade school high of 545 Cougar Points. Lynne Buss and Judy Sager served up the treats.

KATIE ECKOFF'S birthday is not until the middle of June but the third graders helped celebrate early (Tuesday, May 20).

White flower looks like snow

By Karen Krien

This spring has been wet compared to the past few years when there has been a drought. Wild flowers are blooming everywhere.

In most of the pastures in the county there are patches of white flowers, which, from a distance, look like snow. However, farmers and ranchers will be happy to know that Mark Mayfield, extension assistant-plant identification with the Division of Biology-Herbarium, reports that the flower is not a form of bindweed or something similar which would hurt the pastures.

Mr. Mayfield said that both the prairie evening-primrose and bind-weed resemble each others as both have white flowers about the same size but the flower structure is different. The primrose flowers have four separate petals that are not fused into a funnel-shaped base. Bindweed flowers have the petals all fused into a single perfectly funnel-shaped unit. Primrose flowers are not a vine but bindweed has lots of thin wiry stems and long roots which run underground.

"What people are probably seeing is an explosion of prairie evening-primrose flowering this year because of the return of more normal rains," he said. "Remember that the area is hopefully coming out of an extended drought which has resulted in reduced competition from native perennial species."

He added that the fact that a favorable fall and winter moisture regime would have promoted germination of many of the banked seeds which are those that have been held up in the soil during times of unfavorable rains.

Mr. Mayfield said he wouldn't waste any resources trying to control the native plant, especially in native pasture.

"It (the flowers) are of little consequence because by later summer, the grasses will have no trouble competing with the plants.
