Team takes first instate competition

Kansas team takes first in state competition

The second Kansas State Pheasant Competition was held Feb. 21 and 22 at Ringneck Country located south of St. Francis and, even though there were teams from six states, it was a Kansas team taking home the first place honors in the Pointing Division.

Kenny Ray of Hoyt and John Ceerly of Hays placed first in the Pointing Division. Atwood man, Mark Leitner and his teammate Marty Price of Buena Vista, Colo., were second. Keith Gibbs and Frank Lowry took the third place prize back to Lingle, Wyo.

In the Flushing Division, Rich Cummings and Ed Rolls, Holyoke, Colo., were first place winners. Taking second were Sen Richard and Dan Cathcart of Carpenter, Wyo.; and Carl Sax and Keith Bryant of Aurora, Colo., took third.

"We had 127 two-man, one-dog teams this year which filled up the two-day event," said Rex Murray, coordinator of the competition and owner of Ringneck Country.

Contestants came from Colorado, Wyoming, Texas, Oklahoma, Nebraska and Kansas.

The dates for next year's Pheasant Championship is Feb. 19 and 20.

"We have already had several inquiries asking to enter next year," Mr. Murray said. "Hunters are wanting to come from as far as Nevada, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri.

"We didn't have room this year but plan to enlarge the event to approximately 200 teams in the future."

Animal identification program started

By Rep. John Faber

Every once in a while, someone in Strasburg or Vona or some other small town in Colorado will release the brakes on a railroad car. It will start rolling down hill very slowly at first but over the course of about 100 miles, it will reach speeds of up to 70 miles per hour. By passing House Bill 2593 we are unleashing a force that, as the railroad car does, always ends in disaster.

It's possible for this to work out in the following scenario. I as a producer must pay a fee to register my premise, whatever that turns out to be. The livestock commissioner, who is appointed essentially by the Kansas Livestock Association, receives authority to contract certain tasks to an independent organization for the collection and storage of the data received by the livestock commissioner. At this time, the Kansas Livestock Association will have access to all the numbers of cattle in the state, where they are and who owns them. Over the course of a few years, they will also know how each producer's cattle graded when slaughtered. It's possible for them to offer you as a producer a service tracking your cattle from the cow to the packer, thus giving you the ability to improve your herd genetics. You, as a producer, will be forced to pay a fee for this service, plus, a membership in that organization. This will finance their operation from a three pronged fork: the contract with the livestock commissioner, the fee from you the producer and the information sold to the packer about the quality of your commodity.

The issue of this bill is who controls the data. Data is a valuable commodity to those that control it. The entity that acquires the contract to administer this data, whether it be government or private, will be in a position to make tens of millions of dollars - and the ability to control the cattle industry. Whoever acquires the right to sell this data will be in a position of excessive power over the cattle industry.

This issue begs the question, why would an organization that has always stood before the legislature and proclaimed, "We don't want or need anymore regulation of the livestock industry," support this behemoth regulation of the industry? All I need to do to answer this is - follow the money.

Don't buy into the argument that this doesn't have any teeth in it or that we have to do it. The Texas Cattle Feeders Association has just pulled out of the program because of the complicated issues involved. We have set this railroad car in motion and if the Senate passes this legislation, it will mean disastrous results for the producers.

Representative Faber welcomes input on this or any issue. He can be reached at home at 785-694-2619 or at his office 785-296-7500 or by e-mail at jfaber@ink.org.
