Program designed to reward farmers

Six Kansas watersheds were among 202 across the nation invited to participate in a historic new program designed to reward farmers for long-term stewardship. U. S. Secretary of Agriculture Ann M. Veneman announced the selected watersheds on Tuesday, November 2, and said that sign-ups for the 2005 Conservation Security Program (CSP) would begin this winter.

Conservation Security Program, part of the 2002 Farm Bill, was introduced last summer in 18 watersheds nationwide. In this first opportunity for farmers from each state to participate, about one-eighth of the Nation's eligible farmers will be given the chance to apply each year over an eight-year period.

"As an agency and as a Nation we have helped farmers and ranchers fix conservation problems such as soil erosion or water conservation since the Dust Bowl days of the 1930s," said Harold Klaege, State Conservationist for the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) in Kansas, overseeing Conservation Security Program. "This, however, represents a whole new direction in conservation and agricultural policy and programs. These payments for demonstrable long-term stewardship will reward many of those who undertook conservation on their own initiative and who care for the resources we all share."

The six watersheds selected in Kansas are listed below. All watersheds in Kansas have a combined estimate of 7,003 farms with an estimated of 4.3 million acres. Furthermore the program is available on all working lands, such as pastureland, rangeland and all types of cropland where agricultural programs have not always been available. Participants will be enrolled in one of three tiers in the program, depending on the extent of the conservation treatment in place on their farm or ranch. Payments will be based in part on this existing conservation treatment as well as their willingness to undertake additional environmental enhancements.

Conservationist Klaege said that while protecting soil and water quality are the "price of admission" farmers will also have options to improve wildlife habitat, improve nutrient and pest management activities, and improve grazinglands. "In Kansas, Natural Resources Conservation Service will offer local informational meetings in the selected 2005 watersheds to more fully explain the program to interested potential participants," he said.

Conservation Security Program will continue to be offered each year, on a rotational basis, in as many watersheds as funding allows. For more information on Conservation Security Program and other Natural Resources Conservation Service programs see "http://www.nrcs.usda.gov/programs" or www.ks.nrcs.usda.gov. Watersheds: Counties: Middle Arkansas: Lake McKinney-Finney, Greeley, Kearny, Hamilton, Scott, and Wichita; Upper South Fork Solomon, Sheridan, Graham, Rooks, Sherman, and Thomas; Lower Big Blue: Marshall, Nemaha, Pottawatomie, Washington, Clay and Riley; Delaware: Jackson, Nemaha, Jefferson, Shawnee, Atchison, and Brown; North Fork of the Ninnescah: Kiowa, Pratt, Stafford, Reno, Kingman, and Sedgwick; Upper Walnut River: Butler, Harvey, and Sedgwick

Practical gifts ideas for senior citizens

By Loma Davies Silcott

What to give that special senior citizen in your life-the one who seems to have everything, including many pictures of everyone and dozens of dusty nick-knacks? Many times seniors want and need items or help that could be considered nontraditional gifts.

Here are some starter ideas:

Helping gifts that take mostly time

- Rearrange kitchen cabinets, putting the most-used things on the lower shelves and in easily reached drawers.
- Plan to visit regularly and replace any light bulbs, fix any drips, glue anything broken, paint a room as needed, replace torn screens, and be there when any repair people come. Sadly they sometimes take advantage of older people.

- Take the person shopping so he/she can maintain some independence.
- Do heavy yard work.
- Arrange for a monthly house-cleaning service, regular laundry service, or a lawn and garden maintenance service.
- If the person is in a nursing home or assisted living facility, a door decoration can help the person recognize his or her own room.
- Promise to deliver a nice dinner once or twice a week for a year.
- Offer to fill out and file all health insurance claims for the coming year. Such long and fine-print-filled forms discourage many older folks from claiming what is theirs. Kansas Senior Press Service
