mccormickcasey@rocketmail.com I like Ike. But I don't like what Washington is doing to honor Ike. Leave it to our Federal government to mess up things for future generations. Something as simple as placing an effigy to another great president and military leader should be a task they could han-driver's seat when the free world took the fight to the Nazis in Europe to turn the tide in World War II. So how do you suppose the blowhards on the beltway intend to leave the symbol of this important man's achievements? The plan is to show Eisenhower as a small, barefoot lad sitting somewhere in the wide expanse of Kansas as his future waits for him.

Sticking to traditional forms of memorials certainly has worked for Washington's, Jefferson's and Lincoln's. What is so wrong with I mean, here is the man in the staying with what works? But then change for the sake of change seems to be what drives our Capi-

I hear that the Eisenhower family is also unhappy with the design. Who can blame them? I'd be willing to bet that they would be satisfied with a marble statue of Ike standing defiantly as he did as an adult. Mabel Lorwren Pritz Carstens

Dec. 31, 1918 - May 5, 2012

Mabel Lorwren Pritz Carstens was born Dec. 31, 1918, in Pe-Maude L. Pritz. She died on May Mabel graduated from St. Francis Community High School in 1937. On Nov. 2, 1947, she was married to Maynard H. Carstens compassionate person children were born: Neil, Nora and Marla.

Mabel was a devoted wife, mother, grandmother and friend and always had a smile on her face and a twinkle in her eyes. She was an active member of St. John Lutheran Church in Bird City.

Her pride and joy was nurturing her children and sharing in their accomplishments. One of her most beloved joys was listening to her girls play the piano. She proudly displayed them and used the many beautiful pieces of furniture made by Neil. Mabel spent many precious moments with granddaughters Kaitlyn and Maddie making jelly, sewing projects and especially enjoyed snuggling. Grandma's house was always filled with love and laughter.

Baby bottle project

Cheyenne County Kansans for Life are hosting the "Baby Bottle Project." A baby bottle is given to each family leaving your church on Mothers' Day (we supply the baby bottles). The family is asked to place their change in the baby bottle and return it to the church on Fathers' Day. The money raised goes toward the educational efforts of Kansans for Life, which is trying to reestablish a sanctity of life ethic in our culture. If you are interested in doing this at your church, call 1-800-928-LIFE or locally Elmer Kellner at 332-2950.

Youth Beef Quality Assurance Training Modules Now Available Online

opportunity to become certified in Beef Quality Assurance online at it's essential to teach our industry no cost. The Beef Cattle Institute at Kansas State University has launched a Youth Animal Care Training program.

The Beef Quality Assurance program teaches participants about implementing best management practices to help enhance herd profitability and improve consumer confidence in high quality beef products. With increased public attention on animal welfare, the program enables youth and producers to demonstrate their commitment to food safety and quality.

The program features free online educational training modules for youth through high school age. By participating in the training, youth can improve their knowledge of animal handling, animal welfare, antimicrobial residue avoidance and food safety. After a training package is completed, a certificate is available for printing. Through the support of Beef Cattle Institute sponsors, the training packages, certification and electronic record of training are offered to youth at

"Animal handling, welfare, and disease prevention and control are very important management concepts to anyone who raises beef cattle," said Dan Thomson, information on this event will be DVM, assistant dean of outreach

Beef industry youth have the for K-State's College of Veterinary Medicine. "As we move forward, youth these practices early on so they become more routine and instinctive."

Youth can work through the multimedia training modules at any time. Once all the modules within a package are completed and the quizzes are passed with 80 percent accuracy or higher, a certificate is available. There is no time limit or deadline to complete the modules and quizzes.

The program is designed to provide valuable online training in various areas of animal care. Each package is different in the length of time it takes to complete all of the modules. However, each module ranges from five to 20-minutes long. The current training packages

- Youth Beef Quality Assurance (28 modules).
- Youth Dairy Animal Care and Quality Assurance (31 modules). Youth need to re-certify every three years to keep their certificate for Beef Quality Assurance up-todate. The system will send an email a month before the certification is up as a reminder to re-certify.

"As an educational program, BQA helps producers, including young cattle producers, identify management practices that can be improved," said Ryan Ruppert, senior director of Beef Quality Assurance at the National Cattlemen's Beef Association. "The program raises consumer confidence through offering proper management techniques and a commitment to quality within every segment of the beef industry. The program is all about continuous improvement, and these modules get the future farmers and ranchers off on the right foot for a life time of improvement in beef production."

The efforts of Beef Quality Assurance have been instrumental in recent successes that continue to re-build and sustain beef demand. Through the programs, new and experienced producers recognize the economic value of committing to quality beef production at every level, not just at the feedlot or packing plant, but within every segment of the cattle industry.

'Youth are not tomorrow's leaders; they're today's leaders. We must provide them with the tools to help them learn and move the industry forward," Thomson said.
