Casey's Comments

By Casey McCormick

mccormickcasey@rocketmail.com I don't like the looks of this. How far is this "politically correct" nonsense going to go?

David Fabrizio, a middle school principal in Ipswich, Mass, has canceled that school's awards celebration.

In a letter to parents he wrote, "The Honors Night, which can be a great sense of pride for the recipients' families, can also be devastating to a child who has worked extremely hard in a difficult class but who, despite growth, has not been able to maintain a high grade-point average.'

Well you know what Mr. Fabrizio? That's too darn bad!

We live in a tough world. Wouldn't it do more good to have our children realize that life isn't always fair? Rather than coddling kids to soften the blows of reality, might it not be more helpful for them to see early on that not everyone gets the blue ribbon?

But that would be too "devastating" to their little egos.

Perhaps by those kids seeing others recognized for achievements they might find in themselves the power to overcome adversity. Most certainly that would better prepare them for the cold and cruel world that awaits them, more so than this course of political correctness.

Editor to walk in event for brothers

19-months. My twin brother, Norman died just two weeks ago on March 14 and Nathan died on Aug. 14, 2011.

They were both non smokers and drinkers, and among the least likely to suffer with cancer.

Cancer is a dreaded disease but, I know the Lord has a purpose for suffering and provides a positive outlet toward healing. The Lord graciously brought me to Brighton where Norman was living a day earlier than I had planned. Ray and I were coming to take care of our two greatgrandchildren that weekend.

We had just reached Fort Morgan when we received the text message that Norman's body was shutting down. We were there in time to be able to have a good time, reminiscing and laughing with him in the afternoon and evening

Our sister Edna Huggans event will not only be a positive called him late in the evening. Norman's wife woke him up and my brothers, but a positive effort they had a long conversation on toward reaching that goal of livthe phone. The next morning, ing to the age of 91. Norman was gone.

These last conversations were

Two of my brothers have comforting to all of us and they passed away with cancer within will remain as a blessing to remember him by in spite of his suffering.

Norman and I had agreed that we were going to outlive our 90-year-old mother when she passed on. Norman was not able to make it, but his passing has given me the fortitude I need to get with the program of healthy eating and exercise needed to participate in Cheyenne County Relay for Life on June 21. This is an overnight event held in St. Francis and is designed as a memorial to those passed on and to celebrate the cancer survivors.

Norman had been a survivor of colon cancer in 1997, his daughter Tina Carson is a present survivor of breast cancer. She returned to California after attending her Uncle Nathan's funeral to be diagnosed with this cancer.

I feel that participating in this way of dealing with the losses of
