Livestock Transportation Regulations

With the Fall season officially here, producers are busy drilling winter wheat and then corn harvest is just around the corner. Pastures are in need of a break from grazing after the last couple years of dry, hot conditions and cattle will soon be put onto corn stalks. Producers may be moving cattle out of the county or into a neighboring state. Cheyenne County is unique in that it borders two different states, which means different requirements for livestock imports. Currently, there is not a national livestock movement system in place where the same regulations apply to each state. Instead, every state was allowed to develop their own import/export regulations. Since many producers may have access to cornstalks and grazing in those bordering states or counties it is important to know what regulations need to be followed.

The Kansas Department of Agriculture has developed Traceability for Livestock Moved Interstate which became effective March 11, which establishes minimum national official identification and documentation requirements for the traceability of livestock. Animals moved interstate, unless otherwise exempt, must be officially identified and accompanied by a certificate of veterinary inspection. Acceptable identification is an official metal or 840-compliant ear tag or registered breed tattoos when accompanied by certificate. Brands are not acceptable individual animal identification. Metal tags can be obtained from your local veterinarian or Extension Office. The certificate of veterinary inspection must identify each animal being moved and certify cows and heifers are Brucellosis vaccinated. Additional information can be found at the Kansas Department of Ag, Division of Animal Health: <http://agriculture.ks.gov/divisions-programs/division-of-animal-health>.

Importing cattle into Nebraska requires a certificate of veterinary inspection and individual identification. The certificate must include that cows and heifers are at least 120 days pregnant with no contact with any known Trich herds. They must also be Brucellosis vaccinated. Acceptable individual identification includes a bangs tag, official metal ear tag or a registration tattoo with a certificate. Additional information about importing cattle into Nebraska can be found at <http://agriculture.ks.gov/divisions-programs/division-of-animal-health>.

Moving cattle into Colorado will require individual identification with a Brucellosis tag, official metal ear tag or a breed tattoo accompanied with a certificate. The cattle must have a certificate of veterinary inspection with each animal listed and be brucellosis vaccinated.

Finally, after the corn stalks have run out and the grazing has decreased; don't forget you will have requirements to get your cattle home. To get the cattle back into Kansas you will need a certificate of veterinary inspection with proof of a Brucellosis vaccination and each individual animal ear tag listed.

The new regulations can be challenging to follow if producers do not think ahead. It's important to remember that these regulations will serve to be very valuable if a serious disease outbreak ever occurs. They will allow authorities the ability to quickly trace the disease and stop the spread. They are simply something we have to do to protect our livestock and ourselves. Not following the regulations and not having the proper documentation could result in quarantined animals and fines imposed on the owner.

Please contact the Cheyenne County Extension office at 332-3171 or cfear@ksu.edu or your local veterinarian with questions or comments.

Till next week - Marty

Facts

Common baking soda found in most kitchens can be used in other ways besides baking.

- Unclog a drain. Pour 1/2 to 1 cup of baking soda down the drain, then slowly pour 1/2 to 1 cup of white vinegar after it. Let sit for five minutes (covered, if possible). Follow with a gallon of boiling water.

- Remove tough stains from enameled cast iron and stainless steel. Scrub enameled cast iron with a soft nylon brush and a thick paste of baking soda and water. Clean stainless steel with a soft cloth and 4 tablespoons of baking soda dissolved in 1 quart of water. Wipe dry with a clean cloth.
