Casey's Comments

By Casey McCormick mccormickcasey@rocketmail.com Hope can come in unexpected places.

Last weekend we took a break from our daily toils and headed to Glen Elder Lake. Plenty of fun was had playing in the water, eating good food and being around family and friends.

We made a new friend, as a matter of fact, when one of the families brought a guest from another country. Max, a German, is spending a few weeks with the Mike and Jo Roger's clan. He is participating in the 4-H program, International Farm Youth Exchange (IFYE). The young man first stayed in Lawrence before coming to Northwest Kansas. After here, he will head to Ness City, and finally will have some time in New York City. In these parts, an established farm family is often third or fourth generation. Max's family has farmed near their hometown, not far from Mannheim, for 14 generations. But, despite living half a world away and being in the business a bit longer, many of the same issues face the German farmers as they work to feed the masses.

For instance, they have a chalconvincing them that they are using safe agricultural practices lic. 31 while generating the most they can from their crops. Sound familiar?

Over there, a large farm would be a fraction of the size of those found here. Therefore, crop rotations are used so no ground ever sits idle. These crops include cauliflower, kohlrabi, parsley, fennel and rye.

But what impressed me most were the issues and concerns Max expressed for his country and the 29 world we share. Plenty of thought has gone into this arena. Obviously, there are more similarities Board is looking for volunteers between us than what one might expect.

Last, I was very impressed with Max's command of the English language. Thinking back on my year or two of studying German, back in high school, certainly put me at a sad disadvantage. Thank goodness he could bridge the gap.
