Fast times at Elmwood Park

All-school Norton reunion draws crowd

By SONYA MONTGOMERY

Reunions. What fun. A large crowd of Norton Community High School Alumni joined others at the Bluejay Booster Club hamburger feed and then attended the football game as Norton played quite well against the larger Smith Center team.

Saturday afternoon found those alumni visiting with friends at the open house both at the Senior Center and the high school cafeteria.

Saturday evening those in attendance at the banquet held at the Norton American Legion again enjoyed visiting with classmates, old friends and making new friends.

John Allen, 1967 graduate, now of Cincinnati and Kentucky, spoke briefly and supplied several baseballs and a bat, autographed by several players of the Cincinnati Reds baseball team. The items

'Rose' is on list of homes to be toured

By CAROLYN PLOTTS

The Rose of Sharon Inn, situated at the top of East Main Street, is one of four stops on the 2006 Arts Council Homes Tour.

Owned by Gale and Sharon Schulze, a portion of the stately Victorian home has been opened as an inn. Mr. and Mrs. Schulze live in the rest of the spacious home. The house was renamed "The Rose of Sharon" citing the scripture verse from the Song of Solomon 2:1.

Built in 1880 by James and Sarah Maggard, the house was formerly known as the Tinney Inn, named in honor of Dr. Ray and Dr. Grace Tinney. The Tinneys purchased the home in 1916 and set up their medical practice and a small clinic in the house. They served the Norton area until 1933.

Since then the house has been an apartment house and private residence.
