Antique show brought day of joy and delight

A kid in a candy shop with a penny to spend perfectly describes me at the annual Kansas City Crown Center Summer Antique Show. Some of my ever-patient children took me to that wonderland last weekend and while they probably suffered from heat exhaustion, I nearly died of delight. Dozens of big white tents covered the pavilion on a beautiful, sunny Saturday. There was a slight breeze and all the fountains were flowing full force so when we got too warm we'd ramble over toward the water and revel in the cool mist. The wet squares of the puddle fountain were filled with frolicking children. I was tempted to join in but it was gently pointed out to me that no other adults were playing in the pool. Shucks!

Observing the styles and methods of display, the artistry of arrangement is almost as much fun as browsing merchandise and chatting with dealers who had come well-prepared with big hats, water bottles and picnic lunches. By the way, cash is the name of the game with most antiquers so go prepared to lay your dollar down. It's a rare dealer that takes credit cards and most take checks reluctantly.

What's selling? Wooden boxes, all polished up and ready to move out of the pantry and into the parlor were in every booth. Apple boxes, wooden tool caddies, beat-up old chests someone dug out of the barn, even orange crates had been slathered with hot linseed oil and walnut stain, priced anywhere from the twenties to hundreds of dollars. Anything oak was hot and we saw a lot of it. An especially attractive Mission oak hall table looked very authentic displayed with a reproduction Stickley lamp and an Art Deco inkwell. Price tag was well over a thousand and there was intense negotiation going on between a determined dealer and an oak-hungry customer as we wandered by. Lots of small oak plant stands, radio tables and shapes. Saw a well-preserved Chinese wedding chest going for $600 plus, an entire tent full of dolls and doll enthusiasts right next to a booth of school memorabilia. In a garden tent a green thumber was doing land office business selling aloes, ferns, herbs and geraniums potted in old teakettles, enamel coffeepots, spittoons and whatever else came to hand. There was an abundance of the usual bins of books, prints, and framed pictures, old and new, good and really bad. Few quality quilts, no chenille, vintage clothing or hats but a flood of chain and beaded purses from the 1920s.

Quite an assortment of primitives were displayed, including a wooden darning egg which was richly polished from years of faithful service. Practically no cast iron asm but some useful information and the only enamel cookware with fellow collectors. Happy seen was odd colors or unusual hunting!

I oohed and aahed over glassware and vintage radios. Two were particularly interesting to me, one pink, the other aqua, RCA Victors straight out the 1950s. But wait just a minute — that was MY era — and they're being sold at antique shows? Oh dear! Colored rhinestones still in demand and Bakelite jewelry, which was priced sky high. Not much interest in silver. Only one tent was showing any milkglass, best piece was a Fenton Emerald Crest ruffled cake plate at $200. I looked, in vain, for Early American Pattern Glass and found very little. Depression glass was also scarce, mostly green or amber. One large pink Oyster and Pearl salad bowl was selling at a bargain price. Some spectacular Indian basketry caught my eye but the prices were $500 and up so I regretfully passed on by. Toy cars and trucks, mechanical banks and beer signs were pulling in the male customers.

We didn't make it through all the tents but, even so, I left with my eyes full and wallet empty. My only purchases were some tattered cookbooks and a wonderful Thomas Moran print of Devil's Needle, Wyo. The day was a rare treat for me and I hope I've been able to share not only my enthusi-
