As the summer months wind down, wheat farmers start gearing up for planting season. Getting a good stand of wheat during the optimum time in the fall is an important first step in getting good yields, said Jim Shroyer, K-State most common problems in wheat crop production specialist.

"Often, problems with plant growth and development later in the year can be traced back to drill openers, with adequate down poor emergence or inadequate root growth and tiller development in the fall and early winter," Shroyer said.

He described important steps producers can take to improve their chances of getting a good stand of wheat:

• Proper, uniform seeding depth. The ideal planting depth for wheat in most cases is about 1.5 inches.

• Firm seedbed. One of the stand establishment is planting into loose, fluffy soils. Having a pressure, should help.

• Plant during the optimum time. In general, wheat should be planted somewhere around the Hessian fly-free date.

• Adequate soil fertility. In general, producers should apply at least part of their nitrogen needs • Proper tractor speed. It is best before or at planting time to get the planting wheat into grain sorghum stubble, producers will need an extra 30 pounds of nitrogen (N) per acre over their normal N rate. If the wheat is being planted notill after row crop harvest, N rates should be increased by 20 pounds N per acre over the normal N rate. Seeding rates should be increased when planting wheat late after row crop harvest.

It's best to use a seeding rate of 90 to 120 pounds per acre in central and eastern Kansas, and 75 to 100 pounds per acre in western
