Norton may be getting a bowling alley

By CYNTHIA HAYNES

cynthia.haynes@nwkansas.com

Norton may again have a bowling alley because of work being done by its economic development people.

The Norton City/County Economic Development board got an update at its last meeting in mid-December on work being done to get a new bowling alley for the town.

A committee of Brad Hopkins, Donna Foley and Amber Nuttycomb have been working to put together a plan for a new facility.

The economic development board was told that equipment is available and the committee and Economic Development Director Scott Sproul and his staff are working on putting together a 501c3 application, which would set the facility up as a non profit, and are also looking at possible locations.

The economic board was told that the project is coming together nicely and a location will hopefully be finalized soon.

The economic development board also heard from Aaron Hale, who attended the 2013 Northwest Kansas Leadership Challenge in the fall Mr. Hale said that the meetings were helpful and interesting, especially the ones on recruiting young families to move back to Northwest Kansas.

Norton County participants in the seminar have decided to create a business networking group, he said, to locate and work with young professionals and other young adults, who might be interested in moving home.

Mr. Sproul told the group that a Kansas Department of Transportation's Trasportation Enhancement Program Grant could be used to improve the looks of downtown Norton.

Plans for the area would be to alleviate

Meeting of minds...

The City of Almena held a community meeting on Wednesday night in the Community Center to discuss housing needs in Almena. Approximately 20 people attended the meeting. (Left to right) James Foster and Dan Steffen, Kansas Department of Commerce Field Representatives from Hays and Colby, explained how the Housing Assessment Tool (HAT) will help determine the housing needs in Almena and Norton County. The Assessment is also necessary for any grant applications.

State law prohibits leaving unattended cars running

By MIKE STEPHENS

mstephens@nwkansas.com

It's safe to say that nobody likes to sit in their car in freezing temperatures while their car warms up. Many of us will start our car and then go back inside the house to stay warm while the car heats up. Or we leave the car running while we quickly run inside a convenience store for cigarettes, or whatever.

However, just before Christmas, an Oberlin man was ticketed for leaving his car running unattended with the keys in the ignition while he was inside the Dollar General store.

This has left some people wondering just what state traffic laws say about the issue, and to what extent police will enforce them.

This practice of leaving a car running unattended is a violation of Kansas State law. The City of Norton has an ordinance as well that prohibits this. Nonetheless, many of us are guilty of this practice (myself included), but rarely do the police enforce it.

"We haven't had any trouble or any stolen vehicles," said Norton Chief of Police Pat Morel. "We don't go out and actively look for vehicles running unattended."

The same is true for Norton County according to Sheriff Troy Thomson.

"That's not something we've ever enforced. Its never been a problem, and we won't enforce it unless it becomes a problem," said Thomson, but he added, "be aware that you're taking a risk."

Below is the Kansas law regarding unattended running vehicles:

2012 Kansas Statutes 8-1573.

Unattended motor vehicle.

(a) No person driving or in charge of a motor vehicle shall permit it to stand unattended without first stopping the engine, locking the ignition, removing the key from the ignition, effectively setting the brake thereon and, when standing upon any grade, turning the front wheels to the curb or side of the highway.

(b) For the purpose of this section, unattended shall not be construed to mean a motor vehicle with an engine that has been activated by a remote starter system, when the motor vehicle is locked and when the ignition keys are not in the motor vehicle.
