Hospital prepares in mock drill

The Cheyenne County Health Department, Clinic and Hospital conducted a Point of Dispensing Mock Drill (also known as a POD) at the Cheyenne County Health Department on Tuesday, Jan. 24.

The County Health Department can activate a Point of Dispensing Drill in an emergency situation to distribute medications to the county's entire population. The "Gold Standard" for this task is to distribute medications to the county population in 48 hours during an emergency incident, said Shawna Blanka, public information officer at the county hospital.

The county health department has identified three locations throughout the county to distribute needed supplies and medicine to individuals during an emergency. For this mock drill, the point of dispensing was held at the clinic/health department in St. Francis, with hospital and emergency medical service as patients to distribute vaccines as needed.

During an emergency the Cheyenne County Health Department would request these supplies from the Kansas State Department of Health and Environment Emergency Preparedness department. The Kansas Department of Health would them contact the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention which would send these needed supplies and medicine within 12 hours through the Strategic National Stockpile program.

The Cheyenne County Health Department, Hospital and the Cheyenne County Office of Emergency Management have partnered to provide services to the community to distribute needed supplies and medicine during an emergency.

Mrs. Blanka said this was just a test of hospital, clinic and public health staff in case a real incident occurs.
