Students present 'spectacular' program

The St. Francis Grade School music department will present their fall music program at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 25 in the grade school gymnasium. The program will feature the kindergarten and combined first, second and third grade music classes. The program is under the direction of Jean Ann Confer, kindergarten through sixth-grade music teacher.

The 20 kindergarten students will present a patriotic program entitled "The Kids of the U.S.A." The 61 first, second and third graders will present "A Disney Spectacu-

A wide variety of songs, dances and entertainment will be performed.

There will be an all-school dress rehearsal at 10:15 a.m. on Thursday morning. Anyone is welcome to attend.

General election set Nov. 6

The general election will be held on Tuesday, Nov. 6. This should be an interesting election with the office of president of the United States up for election as well as several area and local elections. Area races include the seat of state senator of the 40th district, Ralph Ostmeyer and Allen Schmidt.

On the local scene, there is the race for the position of Cheyenne County Sheriff with three contenders, Cody Beeson, Shane Guggenmos and David Warren.

There are several write-in candidates vying for offices including the seat of commissioner of District 3 and the treasurer's seat. Brett Poling won the primary election over incumbent Andy Beikman. Mr. Beikman is running a write-in campaign against Dr. Poling. Dolores Jenik, treasurer, won the primary unopposed. However, a campaign is now being conducted with voters being asked to write-in Melissa Tabor-McAtee.

This week, those running for sheriff, Beeson, Guggenmos and Warren, are being featured in The Herald's and Times' "Meet the candidates." See Page 3 in this issue for more information on sheriff can-

County doctor receives volunteer teacher award

Mary Beth Miller, MD, a family physician at Cheyenne County Clinic in St. Francis, Kan., is the 2012 American Academy of Family Physicians Exemplary Teaching Award winner in the volunteer category. The American Academy of Family Physicians selects two national winners - one in the full-time category and one in the volunteer category. Dr. Miller attended the American Academy of Family Physicians Congress of Delegates in Philadelphia this week and received her award at that time.

Exemplary Teaching Awards recognize family medicine faculty members who have demonstrated exemplary teaching skills or have developed and implemented innovative new teaching models or programs.

She is a volunteer clinical assistant professor at the University of Kansas School of Medicine-Wichita; Kansas Primary Care Research Network participant; clinical preceptor, Wichita State University Physician Assistant Program; and clinical preceptor, Fort Hays State Nurse Practitioner Program.

liked to "figure things out." She enjoyed science and knew in college that she wanted to go to medical school but doubted herself because she felt that coming from a small town in Nebraska of population 420 meant she wouldn't be "smart" enough. So she settled for being a medical technologist; but the desire for medical school never left her. She finally completed medical school after being a med tech for 12 years.

"Mentors like Dr. Rick Kellerman, Dr. Chuck Allred, and Dr. Richard Ohmart played a big part in that insight. I never knew I liked teaching, it just happened. Again, initially, I felt I wasn't smart enough to teach. Now I realize teaching is more about connecting with each student in the specific way that helps them learn.

'All the years I spent feeling I wasn't 'smart' enough to do things, I have finally realized that any of us can learn anything. But our success with that is largely affected by how we get along with people. I think a person is better at any career when they work well with others. I also realize there is no end to the learning. As long as you like that, medicine is the field to be in. I have always enjoyed being on the learning end! Even when you teach, you learn," Dr. Miller said.

"Some people make a permanent imprint on your psyche, said Rick Kellerman, MD (Professor and Chair, Department of Family

About a year ago, Judy Rockwood joined the Cheyenne County Hospital as the director of nursing. Today, she is not only the director of nursing but has taken on the job of administrator, taking the position of Les Lacy, who resigned to take on the vice presidency of Great Plains Health Alliance. Great Plains is the company which leases the county hospital plus a number of others in Kansas and Nebraska.

Ms. Rockwood has many qualifications to fill the position including being the director of nursing at Rice County Hospital in Lyons and the director of the Children's hospital in Cheyenne, Wyo., but most recently, she was in nursing administration at West Virginia University Hospital in Morgantown, W. Va.
