The money raised is used to match "Big" and "Littles" in the program. This costs around $1,000. The money covers enrolling costs for the Little, recruitment costs for the Big; screening and background checks for the potential Big to ensure safety of the Little; and ongoing support by case managers to provide education and match monitoring.

Kids who participate in the Big Brothers Big Sisters program are 70-percent less likely to be arrested; 55-less likely to skip school; 46-percent less likely to initiate drug use; 33-percent less likely to engage in violent confrontations; and 27-percent less likely to start drinking alcohol.

Filmed for television

This year's program will be filmed by Smoky Hill Public Television for use on their channel next Christmas.

In August, Smoky Hill Public Broadcasting general manager, Michael Quade, and a camera man drove out from Bunker Hill, near Hays, to visit Salem Lutheran. They talked with Pastor Chris Farmer and church council members Keith Zwegardt, Dale Patton and Roger Orth about the feasibility of taping the service. With some electrical modifications by Sam Miller, the church was made ready for the crew to arrive on Dec. 14 to set up and film the Dec. 15 event.

HANGING A QUILT SQUARE on one of the barns in Cheyenne County is Ian Carman, son of Janet Carman.

Barn quilt squares going up in county

Barn quilt squares are starting to appear on barns around the county. There are two quilt squares in Cheyenne County, one on the Marie Holzwarth barn and another on Glenn and Louanne Isernhagen's barn.

Barn quilt squares will be part of the largest outdoor art project in the country, said Janet Carman, one of promoters of the Barn Quilt Trail in Cheyenne County.

The project includes over 3,000 barns displaying quilt squares This trail is also known as the "clothesline of quilts," extending across the nation and into Canada.

The first step to becoming part of the Quilt Trail is to pick up a packet from Karol Lohman, another promoter, at the St. Francis Equity. More information can be obtained by calling Janet Carman at 785-332-3569.

Louanne Isernhagen is also a promoter of the project.
