Headquarters needed for mental disorder

By Keary Carman

Post-traumatic stress disorder or, as many refer to it as PTSD, and I truly believe that. All my is the only mental disorder with a known cause. Nobody really knows what causes depression, anxiety, and schizophrenia, but we do know what creates posttraumatic stress disorder and that is trauma. I think that says quite a bit about mental sufferof addressing trauma as humanity

In near future, I would like to see a headquarters for the 555 Collective, a headquarters that would function as a place where veterans of combat could stay for extended periods of time in the old Assembly of God church building. They could immerse themselves in art and community, as well as engage in projects that aid other survivors of trauma. St. Francis could lead the way.

psychological training and experience has taught me one main truth - that you don't need psychological training to ease another person's pain. All you need is empathy, and to learn to be quiet while another person speaks. Empathy, compassion and un-ing and indicates the importance derstanding are what we would offer the combat veterans who stay with us. They would offer it to each other as well. Within this environment, vets would have the space and support they need to transition to civilian life, and they'd be able to retain a certain self-respect throughout the pro-Watch for more information in
