The Idalia Starlighter's 4-H Club met at 3 on April 7 at St. John Church. There were seven members present. A report was given about the most recent county 4-H meeting. We finalized our club plan and Bryce Schafer presented a demonstration on cake decorating. The next meeting will be held at the Homestead building on Wednesday, May 8, at 5:30 p.m.

Historic display
Betty Moellenberg and Judy Shively are preparing a historic display of Idalia photographs, "Our Community at Work." They are collecting photographs of Idalia residents working on past community projects such as the Idalia school gym, the Fire Hall, the football field, and the playground. If you have any photos you would be willing to contribute please contact Betty or Judy.

The Gardener

By Kay Melia

I wish I knew more about tomatoes. I wish I knew enough about the overall gardening aspects of growing perfect tomatoes. I wish I could guide you through a program of unmistakable success of tomato growing in your backyard garden.
But I can't do that. There are too many variables. Please understand that I am reasonably happy with my own tomato crop out in the backyard. Not giddy. Just happy. I've been doing it long enough to know a few things about what needs to be done and what you should not do to achieve top tomato production. But I also know that there are many aspects of tomato culture that I just don't comprehend. And when push comes to shove, the same philosophy applies to you.

There are, of course, a number of very basic procedures we must follow as we strive to do the job right. First, we must select the variety of tomato that is likely to give us the best results. That, in itself, is not easy. Some varieties are better producers than others. There are gardeners out there who believe Big Beef and Super Fantastic are the best ones to plant. Others will argue that they would never plant anything except the heirloom varieties such as Brandywine, Mortgage Lifter, or Black Krim. I believe that Super Tasty, Northern Exposure, and Shady Lady are the chosen ones. But we all may be wrong. I firmly believe that there are dozens of outstanding varieties, and we must, without fail, try a different one each year until we find one that satisfies our troubled tomato growing minds.
Then, there are the numerous growing and procedural ideas that each of us have. Pull up four chairs around the table; occupy those chairs with four people who have grown tomatoes all their lives, and you are guaranteed to walk out of there a little confused, because you have listened to four completely different plans for tomato success, including your own.

And now you are going to hear my four points of tomato growing success.
No. 1--I believe that variety selection IS the number one decision you will make in your tomato garden this spring. Talk to other gardeners. Talk to garden center operators about their best sellers. Or grow your own transplants, utilizing a variety that someone else has tried and enjoyed with measured success.
No. 2--Either buy, or preferably build, some tomato cages. It is essential that tomato plants have support as they grow.
No. 3--Do not water your tomatoes with a lawn sprinkler. Irrigate them with a soaker hose, install a drip system, or simply allow the water to flow merrily down the row.
No. 4--Fertilize your plants at least twice during the growing season. Fertilize them when the first bloom appears and again about three weeks later. Use a water soluble "pour on" type of fertilizer because it works quickly.
Now go out there and raise the best crop of tomatoes you've ever grown before. Do it your way, and I'll do it my way. But remember, there is probably a better way!

ATTORNEY FOR PLAINTIFF

Author speaks through website

On Monday at the First Christian Church, St. Francis, interested people gathered to learn about Dietrich Bonhoeffer, a German Lutheran pastor who was hung for his role in the Valkyrie, or July Plot, to assassinate Adolf Hitler. The web-based event was shown on the big screen.

Eric Metaxas is the author of a biography entitled Bonhoeffer: Pastor, Martyr, Prophet, Spy, a New York Times Best Seller. During the webcast, Metaxas discussed the rise of the Nazi party and Bonhoeffer's role in the July Plot. He explained how Bonhoeffer's deep faith eventually led him to the decision that Hitler had to be assassinated. During the webcast's discussion that followed his summary of the book, Metaxas drew parallels between the German church and society of that day with our society today.
"The book brings readers face to face with a man determined to do the will of God radically, courageously, and joyfully—even to the point of death." The website www.ericmetaxas.com stated. "Bonhoeffer is the story of a life framed by a passion for truth and a commitment to justice on behalf of those who face implacable evil."

"Silence in the face of evil is itself evil: God will not hold us guiltless. Not to speak is to speak. Not to act is to act," Bonhoeffer wrote.

Two of Bonhoeffer's most popular books are "The Cost of Discipleship" and "Life Together." The event was presented by the St. Francis Ministerial Alliance, the Rough Writers, and the Cheyenne Center for Creativity (CC4C). It was offered in conjunction with National Day of Prayer on Thursday noon at the Cheyenne County Courthouse.
