Legislators try to override ag tourism veto

said Wednesday they will try to override Gov. Kathleen Sebelius' veto of a bill intended to help agricultural tourism.

The bill had won unanimous approval in the Senate, where Agriculture Committee Chairman Derek Schmidt expressed confidence that the necessary two-thirds majority would vote to override the veto.

Fund raising project underway

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — An effort to raise $1 million for a Lewis and Clark bicentennial event next year is about halfway to its goal.

The Wyandotte County Bicentennial Lewis and Clark Task Force more development down by the and the Friends of the Kaw have received a $400,000 commitment from the Unified Government of Wyandotte County and Kansas City, Kan., for a project at Kaw Point. Kaw Point is the place in eastern Kansas City, Kan., where the Kansas and Missouri rivers meet.

That commitment increased the money raised to about a half-million dollars, said Shari Wilson, chairwoman of the task force.

The money will be used to build a historic park to commemorate Lewis and Clark's encampment 200 years ago at Kaw Point and for the Kansas Riverkeeper program.

"I think the UG is really excited about this project and the opportunity to let people rediscover our rivers and hopefully spearhead some riverfront," Wilson said. "We kind of have a public-private partnership. It's largely citizen-driven, and I think that's been very positive as well." The park at Kaw Point will include an education center, a boat ramp with river access, trails and reconstruction of the redoubt built by the expedition as a temporary fortification, Wilson said.

Since Lewis and Clark spent three days in the city 200 years ago, many visitors retracing the trail are expected to visit from June 26-29 in 2004.
