

Program helps farmers leaving profession

Since the summer of 2003, the short-term economic conditions of many Kansas farmers has improved yet the long-term trend toward fewer family farms continues. Comparing data from the 1997 and 2004 Agricultural Census for Kansas, thousands of family level farms have gone out of business. Many farmers continue to face severe financial hardship.

"Farming and ranching have always been risky ventures," said Wayne White of Kansas Legal Services, Inc.

"The past few years have included added hazards ranging from drought to hail storms and tornadoes to frigid temperatures and ice storms. Despite indications that the long Kansas drought is ending, many Kansas farmers and ranchers have already made the decision to leave farming."

Work Opportunities for Rural Kansans is a statewide program which helps self-employed farmers, ranchers and their families make a transition from farming and ranching to non-farm employment. Employment specialists assist program participants in developing employment plans, assessing skills and strengths and in applying for jobs.

White said the program can help pay for tuition as well as provide employers with a monetary incentive to hire individuals for on-the-job training.

It can also help with travel and childcare expenses while individuals are in training or searching for employment.

The program is administered by Kansas Legal Services, Inc. and funded by the U.S. Department of Labor and the Kansas Department of Human Resources.

It is available through the Topeka office of Kansas Legal Services at (785) 233-2068 and out reach offices in Hays, Manhattan, Dodge City and Great Bend.

Lawmakers frustrated with Boeing's buyer plans

TOPEKA (AP) — Elected officials expressed frustration Thursday following the disclosure that Boeing Co. is looking for a buyer for its commercial aircraft and support operations in Wichita, especially in light of past efforts to keep the aviation giant in the state.

"This deeply troubling turn of events strengthens my concern regarding the long-term strategy of Boeing, a company that we have all worked so hard to help over the years," said U.S. Sen. Sam Brownback. "The Boeing corporate strategy has proven to be bad for Boeing, bad for Wichita, and bad for America."

Boeing notified its employees through an internal memo, dated

Thursday, that it is considering a sale of operations in Wichita and two locations in Oklahoma.

"They're saying Wichita would remain a critical supplier to the Boeing Co., but that's not like being part of Boeing," said Senate President Dave Kerr, R-Hutchinson. "We've had a long relationship with the Boeing Co. If that were to come to an end, it would be very hard on the Kansas economy."

Wichita's congressman, GOP Rep. Todd Tiahrt, said: "I'm very disappointed.

"I've done everything within my power to keep high-paying, high-quality jobs with the Boeing name, but obviously I can't control what the Boeing Co. does."
