Citizens Foundation offering two health care scholarships

By Jan Katz Ackerman
Colby Free Press

Students pursuing medical careers can apply for one of two scholarships being offered locally.

Citizens Foundation is sponsoring awards valued at more than $2,000 through an application process which will end at 3 p.m. on April 30.

“The foundation works throughout the year to raise funds for needed medical equipment and medical education as can be seen by the scholarships we provide,” Tama Unger director of fund development said. “Our mission is to help provide for excellence in health care.”

Citizens Foundation is the fund raising arm of Citizens Medical Center, Inc. The Citizens Medical Center Inc. Health Care scholarship has been increased by $500 this year to $1,500.

Unger said applicants for this scholarship must plan to attend Colby Community College, live in Cheyenne, Rawlins, Decatur, Sherman, Thomas, Sheridan, Wallace, Gove or Logan Counties. They must also want to pursue their medical career in a rural setting.

The memorial scholarship named in honor of Colby resident Dr. Jeff

“He graduated from Colby High School and from Colby Community College, went on to pursue his highly professional field in medicine and returned to rural America, specifically Colby, to practice.”

Tama Unger,
director of fund development

Jennings who died in 2001, will be for $1,000. Applicants must have graduated from a Thomas County High School, or live in Thomas County, or work at Citizens Medical Center, and continue his or her education in a health care related field of study.

“Dr. Jennings chose courses in his life that we are strongly encouraging through our scholarship process,” Unger said.

“He graduated from Colby High School and from Colby Community College, went on to pursue his highly professional field in medicine and returned to rural America, specifically Colby, to practice.”

Unger said the Citizens Foundation is proud to be able to put funds together to help people succeed, whether just graduating or furthering their medical education after being away from academia.

“In many areas of health care there is a shortage of workers and professionals.

“These scholarships are important because they encourage and help those who are starting or planning to enhance their medical education,” Unger said.

She said the application process is open to both traditional and non-traditional students pursuing medically related fields such as dietary, physical therapy, nursing, and even administrative and business pieces can apply for the scholarships.

“Education is an expensive endeavor, but a very necessary one,” Unger said.

One competitor planning pipeline

Brazil, a major competitor to the U.S. ethanol industry, is considering building a $225 million pipeline to carry ethanol from the country’s interior to the coastal state of Sao Paulo to open up new export opportunities for the federal energy company Petrobras.

“Both state and federal support is critical to building a real ethanol industry,” said Professor Dan Kammen, an expert on ethanol production at the Goldman School of Public Policy at the University of California, Berkeley.

“Real action is needed, and the $150 million per year President Bush promised is wholly insufficient.”

American producers are still grappling with how to meet rising domestic demand.

Six states have passed laws that require ethanol-blended gasoline, and nine others are considering similar legislation, according to the American Coalition for Ethanol.

Kansas and Missouri both are considering proposals to require that all gasoline sold in each state contain 10 percent ethanol by 2010.

As plants rush to pump out fuel, companies like the Wichita-based United Bio Energy, LLC, which employs Garnett plant manager Derek Peine, are in the next phase.

“We’re trucking this stuff to Tulsa (Okla.), Springfield (Mo.), Fayetteville (Ark.),” said Peine, as he walked through the hulking warehouse. “It’s all corn from local farmers.”

Peine says his factory pays growers $0.12 more per bushel of corn than they would fetch on the open market.

But once the fuel leaves Garnett, there’s still the question of who will buy it.

Of the 170,000 service stations in the United States, less than 600 sell gas blended with 85 percent ethanol, called E-85.

Most American-made cars can now run on gas blended with 10 percent ethanol, which is sold at about one-third of the country’s gas stations, according to the Renewable Fuels Association.

American automakers, who get a tax break from building alternative fuel cars, want to see that number grow. On Feb. 16, Ford Motor Co. announced it would pay to help install E-85 dispensers in gas stations in Illinois and Missouri.

Several Kansas-based companies are helping drive those changes, too.

United Bio Energy and Ethanol Products, which is also based near Wichita, negotiate with major oil companies to get ethanol inserted into their gas.

Together they now sell 40 percent of all wholesale contracts for the agri-fuel.

Both companies are privately held and reluctant to discuss their financials, but United Bio Energy Director of Marketing Greg Kriesek said his firm’s sales volume will quintuple in the next five years as the market heats up.

“A lot of the producers don’t want to get into marketing and shipping it to the end user, that’s not their thing,” said Jordan.

“But this is a particularly good niche to be in for the next few years. It’s going to be unbelievable.”
