Program helps many

WAKEENEY (AP)—With great love for children and for helping her community, Shirley Scholl takes time out whenever she can to fill in for an absent grandparent. She has participated for one year so far in the Foster Grandparent Program sponsored by Fort Hays State University.

But it has become something more than just program participation for Scholl.

"This gives me a reason to get out of bed every day. I just dearly love children."

"Just to see the smile on their faces means so much to me, and I get to give something back to my community," said Scholl, 67.

For the last year, Scholl has aided WaKeeney Grade School teacher

Jackie Schreiner with second-graders in the classroom.

"I do a little bit of everything," she said.

That "little bit of everything" includes going over spelling words with the children, assembling educational materials, grading tests and papers, and helping the students with their work.

The program is part of Senior Corps, a group of national service programs to give senior citizens a chance to put their life experiences to work at their community schools, day care centers, after-school programs, drug treatment centers, correctional institutions, Head Start centers, libraries, hospitals and homes.
