

‘Merry Christmas’ lunch menus pulled

SEATTLE (AP) — Holiday religious issues arose in two suburban school districts, one for lunch menus with the words “Merry Christmas” and the other for a “giving tree.”

In Federal Way, between Seattle and Tacoma, December lunch menus for all 23 elementary schools were recalled and reprinted with the words “Happy Holidays” at a cost of $494 after a new nutrition services employee mistakenly prepared them with the greeting “Merry Christmas,” spokeswoman Diane Turner said.

Using “Merry Christmas” on the menus violated school system policies because “it has a religious connotation for some people,” Turner said. The 11,500 calendar-style menus were never distributed and were recycled.

In Medina, east of Lake Washington, a Christmas-style tree bearing mittens labeled with gift ideas was up for about a week at Medina Elementary School before it was removed, office manager Chris Metzger said.

The idea was for pupils to take a mitten, get the listed gift, wrap it and bring it to school to be given to someone at Lake Hills Elementary School in a less well-off section of neighboring Bellevue.

“We covered the star and called it a giving tree. We hoped it would suffice, but it didn’t.”

Some parents had put up the spiral, lighted tree with a star at the top, but it was removed Monday after another parent complained that it had religious connotations, Metzger said.

The mittens were transferred to a counter in the office so the gift program could continue.

“We covered the star and called it a giving tree.

“We hoped it would suffice, but it didn’t,” Metzger said. “Now we just have a giving counter.”
