Boy humiliated at birthday party

DEAR ABBY: Not long ago, I attended a birthday party for a 5year-old boy. After the cake was brought out and the birthday song had been sung, the child's face was shoved into his beautiful birthday cake. The boy cried piteously amidst the roaring laughter of the children and the adults in the crowd.

displayed shock, disgust and sympathy for the birthday boy. As if that wasn't enough, his 3-year-old brother was also smeared with the cake and frosting. He, too, burst into tears.

I have seen the same scenario at a 90-year-old's birthday party. Please give me your thoughts on this. There are other children's birthday parties I will be attending.

- DISMAYED GRAND-

MOTHER, LAREDO, TEXAS DEAR DISMAYED: I'm glad to oblige. I have never found humor at the expense of others to be funny. I consider it to be cruel, hostile, and a form of bullying. That a parent would tolerate, much less participate in, the humiliation of his or her child is an appalling breach of trust. If you truly believe that you will be seeing a repeat performance at another child's birthday party, I wouldn't blame you for not attending — and clearly stating the reason why.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating "Neil" for two years. It has been an emotional roller-coaster, mostly because we live 500 miles apart and can't afford to visit each other regularly.

My problem is Neil is still in possession of the bridal gown that belonged to his former fiancee. They broke up more than five years ago. She has since married and gone on with her life.

Last March, I finally felt I had a right to ask him to dispose of it, but

I, and a few of the other adults, he still has it. He tells me he is "trying" to get rid of it, but I have seen no real effort. (He said he has offered it for sale, but has had no takers.)

I just want it gone! Neil feels I'm overreacting. He insists he wants the money back that he spent on it. I say no one will pay what he originally paid, and he should cut his losses. I even offered to buy it and donate it to charity. All I got was a smile and, "I'll think about it."

Abby, I feel Neil is holding on to a past that's not there. I know he loves me and not her. But I'd feel better if that "reminder" was gone already. Am I wrong?

- DESPERATE GIRL-FRIEND

DEAR DESPERATE: If I were you, I'd drop the subject for now because you are needlessly turning this into a power struggle. You might succeed in bullying him into getting rid of this sad memento, but what I think you really resent is the emotional investment it represents. Please believe me when I tell you that the more you nag, the further you'll drive him away and I don't mean geographically. If and when the romance moves to the next level - a formal engagement or marriage - ask him to "store" the dress elsewhere if it means too much to get rid of.

DEAR ABBY: My question concerns wedding etiquette. If my coworkers give me a wedding shower at work, am I obligated to invite them to my wedding?

DEAR CONFUSED BRIDE: If someone hosts or attends a shower for you, in my opinion, good man-Van Buren ners dictate that the person be invited to your wedding.

Dear Abby DEAR ABBY: My friend "George" was widowed for a long time. He remarried a couple of years ago to "Renee," an incessant talker. Renee turns every conversation back either to herself or her daughter. It has gotten so bad that my wife and I really don't want to see them anymore.

Other people, including George, are aware of the problem. I asked him once if Renee realized how much she talked, and he replied that she's totally unaware of it. He doesn't know what to do about it, either.

Is there a way to get a message across to her that she's driving people crazy, and for the sake of the friendship, she needs to stop talking so much?

Please advise.

We like them and would like to remain friends.

- CLUELESS

DEAR CLUELESS: Renee may be insecure and need to feel in control. She may need to be the center of attention, or be a compulsive talker.

Her problem could also be that she feels she's competing with the ghost of George's first wife, and rather than work to preserve his old friendships, she'd prefer they cultivate new ones together, with couples who never knew wife No. 1. Of course, the person who needs to address this problem with Renee is her husband.

If that doesn't improve the situation, my advice is to see George only for "man-to-man" visits over lunch.

Famous Hand

One characteristic of the top players is their ability to conjure up brilliant plays apparently on the spur of the moment. As a case in point, consider this deal from the Brazil-Turkey match at the 1980 World Team Olympiad. Hero of the hand was the well-known Brazilian star Gabriel Chagas, who was East.

After West (Pedro Paulo Assumpcao) opened two clubs, showing a minimum opening bid with a strong club suit, the Turkish North-South reached four spades, against which Assumpcao led the heart ten.

South took the ace and, realizing he could not afford to draw trumps before establishing his diamonds, led a low diamond at trick two. Assumpcao went up with the ace, on which Chagas smoothly played the king!

Declarer won West's heart continuation with the queen and, confident he was now home free, drew trumps, on which West discarded two clubs, then led the nine of diamonds and let it ride. One can only imagine his astonishment when Chagas produced the jack and returned a club, enabling West to score his remaining clubs for down three.

Had Chagas followed to the first diamond with the jack, as any ordinary mortal would have done, declarer would have had no trouble making the contract. But while we fully sympathize with South, it must be pointed out that he should have smelled a rat.

If West really had the A-J-8 of diamonds, as South presumably thought, why had West not returned a diamond at trick three for East to ruff? A club to West's ace would then have yielded a second diamond ruff to set the contract. Since West had not returned a diamond, though, there was good reason to suspect that things were not what they seemed. However, even if South had been less gullible and worked out what was actually going on, this in no way diminishes the brilliance and audacity of Chagas' king-of- diamonds play.
