Bridge — Bidding Quiz

You are South, both sides vulnerable. The bidding has been:

East South West North
Pass Pass Pass 1 [D]
Pass ?

What would you bid with each of the following hands?

- [S] J2 [H] 84 [D] AQ95 [C] KJ963
- [S] Q95 [H] J104 [D] 8 [C] AK9854
- [S] KJ4 [H] AJ6 [D] J763 [C] Q85
- [S] J7 [H] AQ962 [D] QJ843 [C] 7

1. Thre diamonds.

Many of the hard-and-fast principles that govern responses to an opening bid do not apply after a player has passed originally.

Thus, while a two-club response to one diamond would be unconditionally forcing without a previous pass, the same response would not be forcing here after your initial pass.

The reason is obvious.

The opener is frequently in a position to judge that game is virtually impossible once partner has passed.

Usually, it takes the equivalent of two opening bids to make a game, so if opener has minimal values, he might elect to pass what would normally be regarded as a forcing bid by an unpassed hand.

The recommended jump to three diamonds shows good trump support and values just short of an opening bid. It urges but does not command partner to bid again.

2.. Two clubs. There is some temptation to respond three clubs to show your near-opening-bid values, but it is better to proceed slowly in hands where a trump fit is not yet established. Two clubs shows at least 10 points — passed hand or not — and is therefore a constructive response.

3. Two notrump.

Ordinarily, two notrump would promise a balanced hand of 13 to 15 points and be forcing to game, but after an initial pass, the range is 11 or 12. Opener is thus free to pass whenever his hand indicates that that would be the right thing to do.

4. Two hearts. Most hands change in value as the bidding progresses.

Not many players would regard this hand as worth an opening bid, but once partner opens with a diamond, the hand increases greatly in value and assumes the stature of an opening bid.

The best way of describing such values is by a jump-shift, indicating a strong suit and implying a fit for opener's suit.

Partner is thus warned that if he passes two hearts — which he may do in an extremely rare case — he is running the risk of losing a game in either hearts or diamonds.

Swapping Horses in Midstream

Declarer can sometimes turn what appears to be an unfriendly development to his own advantage. To do so, however, he must remain flexible at all times, lest the opportunity pass him by.

Consider this deal where West led the club queen against five diamonds. South's only concern was the possibility of losing three heart tricks, and he could see two chances to hold his heart losers to two. One was that the jack of spades might fall when he cashed his three top spades, establishing the ten for a discard of one of dummy's hearts. Failing that, he could lead a heart from dummy and hope East had the ace.

Accordingly, South ruffed the club lead, drew a round of trumps and cashed the A-Q-K of spades. When the jack did not appear, South crossed to dummy by ruffing the ten of spades and led a heart to the king. West won with the ace, and the defense cashed two more hearts for down one.

Declarer would have made the contract had he revised his original plan after uncovering the actual spade division. That West still had the jack of spades served South's ultimate purpose just as well as a more favorable spade division.

After taking the high spades, declarer should have led a trump to dummy, ruffed dummy's last club and then led the ten of spades. Instead of trumping West's jack, however, South would discard one of dummy's hearts.

This would leave West in a hopeless predicament. If he led a heart, South would score the king, and if he led a club, declarer would discard a second heart from dummy while trumping in his hand. Dummy's last heart would be South's only other loser, and the contract would be assured.
