This is a logic-based number placement puzzle. The goal is to enter a number, 1-9, in each cell in which each row, column and 3x3 region must contain only one instance of each numeral. The solution to today's Sudoku puzzle is at the bottom of this page.

Compact fluorescent lamps offer savings

SALINA (AP) — Only slightly younger and less versatile than the knock-knock genre of jokes, the light bulb joke can be twisted (pun intended) to fit almost any circumstance.

And so, how many pounds of coal does it take to run a light bulb?

Let's look at a typical 100-watt bulb; if it's on for four hours a day for a year, about 166 pounds of coal will be burned to keep it lit. Burning that coal will put about 300 pounds of carbon dioxide into the atmosphere. And at four hours a day, it'll last about a year before needing replaced.

But in just the past year or so, an alternative has started appearing on store shelves that promises to not only last five, six or more years but also to cut power consumption by 75 percent enough that a single compact fluorescent lamp could save $30, $40 or more in energy over its lifetime.

It's that savings that was on Phillip McBride's mind during a recent shopping trip to Wal-Mart.

He'd just installed four new ceiling fans in his home in Hope. He had several packages of 40-watt torch bulbs in his cart but paused in front of the "swirly" compact fluorescent lamps that just recently started taking up several feet of shelf space in the store.

He'd seen a display at the end of the aisle in the hardware section, which showed several common types of light bulbs alongside their fluorescent counterparts; he didn't really want the "swirlies (compact fluorescents)" where they'd be seen in a ceiling fan but soon found compact fluorescents with a torch-shaped cover. "I'm just checking the equivalents," he said, comparing the packages.

The fluorescents that put out the same light as the traditional 40-watt bulbs use just 7 watts. They do cost more upfront: the 3-packs of fluorescents were $9.97, while a 2-pack of incandescents were just $1.94.

That puts each compact fluorescent at $3.33, compared to 97 cents a piece for the incandescents but with each fluorescent rated at 6,000 hours instead of 1,500 for the older model, McBride would replace that 97-cent bulb four times during the fluorescent's lifespan. Add in the lower power consumption each compact fluorescent would use about $30 less electricity over its life than the four bulbs it's replacing and it makes sense.
