I place the book orders, so in theory, I should know just what books are coming. However, each time it is just as exciting to see the bright shiny covers and to smell the new book smell. We got a shipment just this week of newly released titles, so there are lots of fun new items for you to check-out.

Janet Evanovich and James Patterson are two of our most popular authors. Fans of both will want to be sure to get their names on the list for Sail by James Patterson (written with Howard Roughan who co-authored Honeymoon and You've Been Warned with Patterson) and Fearless Fourteen by Janet Evanovich.

Walter Mosley's new book is The Tempest Tales. When Tempest Landry is "accidentally" killed by a cop, St. Peter denies him access to heaven. Tempest refuses to go to hell for what he considers a few minor transgressions. Stymied, Saint Peter sends him back to Harlem, where a guiding angel tries to convince him to accept Saint Peter's judgment, and even the Devil himself tries to win over Tempest's soul. This short but powerful book asks some deep questions about good vs evil, black vs white, and man vs God.

If you enjoy cooking, a good book just in time for summer dining is Mediterranean Fresh: A Compendium of One-Plate Salad Meals by Joyce Goldstein. If the

The recipes in this book move the salad from a small bowl of lettuce before the meal, to the meal itself. With a vast array of fresh ingredients to choose from, and a variety of dressings and vinaigrettes, you are sure to find a perfect recipe for a summer meal.

Tennis is a summer activity enjoyed by many. In professional tennis, the French Open unofficially starts the summer the first week of June. Wimbledon is over the Fourth of July, and the U.S. Open closes out summer over Labor Day weekend.

You don't have to be a fan of tennis to have heard of Pete Sampras. Even though his career was legendary, Sampras revealed little of himself. In his new book A Champion's Mind: Lessons From A Life In Tennis, Sampras finally

“At the end of the day I decided to do a classy book, to do a book that I can be proud of, that my kids can read, and their kids can read, just sort of a timeless book, and just to have the public really get to know me a little bit better.” This book isn’t a “tell-all” about tennis players. Instead, Sampras offers an intimate look at the life of an elite athlete.

Summer Reading is in full swing here at the library. If you haven't had a chance to "Catch the Reading Bug," there are a variety of story times and activities coming up.

The Butterfly Pavilion from Littleton, Colo., will be at the library at 1 p.m., Thursday, June 19. Kids of all ages are invited to come get up close and personal with live insects, spiders, etc. from around the world. Come join us for a fun afternoon, or just come by to cool off and check out some good reading.

TOPEKA (AP)- It will cost more to attend the six state universities in Kansas next year.	$175.50 a semester for a student taking 15 hours. Nonresident juniors, seniors and trans-

The Kansas Board of Regents on Thursday approved tuition increases ranging from 4.9 percent to 6 percent for the universities and extended a program at the University of Kansas that sets a fixed four-year tuition rate for incoming freshmen.

Under the so-called tuition compact, University of Kansas freshmen will pay $229.25 per credit hour this fall, and that rate will not change through the 2011-12 school year. That's an increase of $244 a semester, or 7.6 percent, more than 2007 freshmen paid.

Juniors, seniors, transfers and graduate students will pay 6 percent more in tuition at Kansas next fall, or an additional

The regents also approved a 5.9 percent increase, or $164.55 per credit, for undergraduate students taking 15 hours at Kansas State. In May, Kansas State had proposed imposing most of the increases on juniors and seniors, but that plan was later dropped.

Tuition rate increases approved for other universities, all based on undergraduates taking 15 credit hours, were: Wichita State, 5.9 percent, or $116.25 per credit hour; Emporia State, 4.9 percent, or $77 per credit; Pittsburg State, 5.8 percent, or $93; and 5.5 percent, or $71.25 at Fort Hays State.

● Ask Dr. Brothers

Ask Dr. Joyce

Dear Dr. Brothers: I can't get interested in sex anymore. This is strange for me, and I really don't like it. I've been married for about four years, and I still feel sexually attracted to my husband, but when we actually get into bed, I just can't get excited. I haven't talked to my husband about it yet, because I don't want him to think it's his fault or that he's doing anything wrong. What's happening to me? How can I get my sex drive back?

— M.T.

Dear M.T.: First, make sure there's no physical cause for your change in sexual drive. Are you going through menopause? Did you recently start, stop or change birth-control pills? Any changes in your hormonal profile can sometimes cause temporary changes in your sex drive. Other medications that are seemingly unrelated also can affect your sex drive. It sounds like there hasn't been any significant trauma or event in your life that could have precipitated this drop in sexual arousal, but it may be worth spending some time thinking about subtle changes that might have affected your overall outlook or stress level. Sometimes it can be something you wouldn't expect.

You should not put off talking to your husband about this problem any longer, either. It's unlikely that he'll be offended by your lack of interest; instead, he probably will want to help you through this to become interested in sex again. If you've continued to have sex while you're not feeling excited about it, he may already have noticed that there is something wrong, and your honesty and candor will be much appreciated. In fact, in talking with him about it, together you might be able to come up with a solution that you hadn't thought of on your own.

Dear Dr. Brothers: My husband and I are expecting our first child in a few months, and I'm terrified. I never baby-sat as a kid, and none of my relatives or friends have had kids I've spent any time with. Honestly, I'm sort of scared of children, and I don't know how to react to them or what to expect from them. Everyone says that it's different when you actually have your own baby, but I'm afraid I'm going to do something wrong or mess up my baby. Help.
