Shows tune into Greensburg

WICHITA (AP) - Is it the selves. 'greening" of Greensburg or the 'screening" of Greensburg?

One month after the first TV series starting running about efforts to rebuild this tornado-ravaged town, a second is wrapping up production.

Tentatively titled "Families of Greensburg," it's a six-part series scheduled to premiere Aug. 23 on TLC. Each episode follows a different family as it prepares to move into a new home with help from two experts from another TLC show, "Trading Spaces."

"I'm nervous to watch it on TV, but it was a fun experience," said Haley Kern, whose family is one of those that will be featured.

The way things are going, Greensburg residents may need their own agents.

In June, the Discovery Channel's Planet Green started airing the 13-part "Greensburg," which follows the town's attempts to rebuild along ecologically sound lines. CBS's "Morning Show" has twice broadcast live from the Kiowa County town.

Assistant City Administrator Kim Alderfer said ABC's "Extreme Makeover" also looked into filming in Greensburg, but couldn't find a home that fit its specifications.

In that show, renovation experts transform an existing home. But after the May 4, 2007, tornado that hit this town, Alderfer said, "There weren't a lot of houses that were still standing.'

"Families of Greensburg" focuses more on cosmetic touches albeit expensive ones for new homes that families displaced by the tornado are just now moving into, said Dustin Smith, a publicist for TLC.

"They work to help these families transform these brand new houses into homes," he said.

The show's hosts are designer Doug Wilson and carpenter Faber Dewar, who are both featured on "Trading Spaces."

Under their direction, participating families take turns working on each other's homes. The family's reactions to changes in their homes are filmed during "reveals" that are the climax of each epi-

Kern and her family have lived in Pratt since the tornado obliterated their home. They spent that night in a neighbor's basement. Kern's husband, Peter, is a woodshop teacher and assistant football coach at Greensburg High School. Their daughter, McKenna, is 3.

The Kerns bought one of the town's few remaining standing homes, which had been heavily damaged, and remodeled it them-

TV crew for Discovery, which is affiliated with TLC, they got a call from the show's producers saying they had been chosen.

Haley Kern talked with Wilson several times about her family and their hopes for their new home. For instance, Peter Kern had made fed them a barbecue dinner. The kitchen cabinets by hand.

During the reveal, the show brought in friends and family and show's producers didn't tell the Kerns how much the work cost. rian countertops to the kitchen, The couple have worked on two laid wooden flooring through other homes that will be featured.
