

Nation marks seventh anniversary of attack

NEW YORK (AP) _ The nation paused Thursday to mark the seventh anniversary of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks with a heartfelt ceremony at the World Trade Center site, the dedication of a memorial at the Pentagon and a planned visit to ground zero by the presidential candidates.

Relatives of victims killed at the World Trade Center gathered in lower Manhattan for readings from dignitaries and a recitation of the names of the dead. Later Thursday, Barack Obama and John McCain were due at ground zero to pay silent respects.

“Today marks the seventh anniversary of the day our world was broken,” Mayor Michael Bloomberg said at the start of the ceremony, calling Sept. 11, 2001, a “day that began like any other and ended as none ever has.”

The ritual at ground zero included moments of silence at 8:46 a.m., 9:03 a.m. and 9:59 a.m. and 10:29 — the times when two hijacked jets slammed into the trade center buildings and the twin towers fell.

Services were also held in Pennsylvania and at the Pentagon, where a new memorial was dedicated.

Among the speakers at ground zero were three children who were very young when their father went to work at the World Trade Center seven years ago and never came home.

“I remember playing in the yard with him. I remember him pulling my wagon. He was strong. He always made me feel safe,” said Alex Salamone, wearing the soccer jersey of his father, John. “I wish I could remember more, but we were so young when he died.”

Edward Bracken, who lost his sister, Lucy A. Fishman, said she was “murdered by coward men using their religion to say they are right and we are wrong,” then added, “Pray for the men and women who sleep on the ground every night in the Middle East to keep our world safe.”

Relatives of victims began arriving at dawn at ground zero, now a huge construction site. American flags were draped over silent cranes, and some families held signs saying “We miss you,” “We love you” or “You will never be forgotten.”
