Pi Gamma Club

On Jan. 23, Pi Gamma Club held its monthly meeting at the Pioneer Memorial Library. Cohostesses Mary Smith and Terry Starns provided refreshments.

Sharon Kriss read several poems on "Home" and the passed out pictures of every member's front door. Asked to identify who lived there, the members found it was more difficult then they thought.

Pi Gamma's Feb. 27 meeting was held at Katie Currier's home. Joan Calhoon sat in for President Carol Baker.

The collect was repeated. Treasurer, Mary Smith read a letter from the Colby High School Career Center with their returned check. They were unable to recruit a student for the "HOBY" program but thanked them for supporting education and the students. Smith also read thank-you notes from the museum and Thomas County Community Foundation.

Under new business, Currier announced they needed to plan a date for spring cleaning of the Eller House at the museum. It was voted to meet with cleaning supplies at the Eller House at 2 p.m. on Monday, April 6.

Currier discussed programs for the coming year. She suggested going to the Cottonwood Ranch. Currier said her sister-in-law from Studley donated her crystal dinnerware to them.

Roll call was answered with, "How did you meet your husband." This proved to be interesting.

The Pledge of Allegiance was given and Currier served peach cobbler.

The next meeting will be at the the library on Friday for the Linda-Davis Stephens' program, "High Plains Digs." Pi Gamma's next regular meeting will be Friday, March 27, at Calhoon's home. The program, "Me and Shirley Temple.

in Colby for spring break and on Thursday she visited the Pioneer Memorial Library to find some magazines to enjoy.

Teens need to study finances

There has been much discussion about financial literacy during this time of economic crisis. Kansans-both young and oldhave fallen on troubled times.

Some face trouble because of bad choices and some became the victims of scams or predatory lenders.

Despite the reason, each of them could have benefited from financial training.

I support additional consumer training for our young people. In an effort to educate teens about consumer threats, my office recently hosted two consumer workshops for Kansas high school students. The goal was to educate students about consumer issues before they head out on their own.

We taught 700 high school students the ABC's of personal finance, tips on contracts, student loan practices, the keys to protecting their identity and other issues affecting students today.

Now, a proposal is being discussed in the Kansas legislature to add financial education to the school curriculum.

Senate Bill 84 would require teachers to provide education on specific topics, including: credit card debt, responsibilities of renting or buying a home, understanding loans and borrowing money, insurance, identity fraud and theft, scams and charitable giving.

While I support the idea of additional financial and consumer education for our young people, teachers must also be given appropriate resources to provide effective training.

Consumer protection is a priority for my office. It is important that our children learn the ins and outs of being a smart consumer Fostering a generation of responsible consumers is key to our State's future economic stability and prosperity.

It's time we help our kids protect themselves from consumer threats.
