Time capsule discovered in Fort Hays renovation

sity were going as planned until workers removed the cornerstone and found something they hadn't expected: a time capsule that had been encased in concrete since the cornerstone's laying Oct. 1, 1903.

The capsule, ensconced in a tin 106 years since, contained a Sept. 26, 1903, edition of The Hays Free Press and several editions of The Western School Journal.

The origin of the capsule is unknown. No identifying information on the people who placed it in its concrete safe was included with the publications. Officials assume the capsule was placed during a cornerstone laying ceremony, as the edition of The Free Press was from less than a week prior.

the touch, The Press paper could Street, what is now Seventh Street, still be opened and read and of- thanking them for planting shade

HAYS – Renovations of Picken fer insights into the city of Hays trees and constructing wide side-Hall at Fort Hays State Univer- and the university's beginnings as the Western Branch of the Kansas State Normal School in Emporia.

Amid advertisements for Winchester repeating rifles, Tower's pommel slickers and W.L. Douglas shoes, for a whopping $3.50 a pair, sits an article titled "Westbox that had corroded away in the ern Kansas Normal School," proclaiming the appropriation of $20,000 for the construction of a stone building for the Normal School in Hays, which was the beginning of what we now know as Fort Hays State University.

Included in the yellowed, twocolumn write-up is a tally of the school's enrollment, which, the paper boasts, is twice as high as Emporia's normal school (now Emporia State University) had been in its first year and a note While the Journals crumbled to to homeowners on Floyd Jones walks in preparation for the flood of students.

Another time capsule was opened in 2001 during the centennial ceremony. It was buried in 1977 to usher in 2002, the university's 100th year. In 2002, the capsule was replaced with one to be unearthed in 2027, Fort Hays' 125th year. Inside this capsule was a scroll signed by faculty that challenges the 2027 faculty to rededicate themselves to the school's academic mission, along with a variety of contemporary items.

Instead of a tin box, this capsule was buried in a plastic tube capped on both ends. The hope is that this capsule will stand the test of time better than its 1902 predecessor and give students in 2027 an idea of what it was like on the campus at the turn of the millennium.

Insurance agents warned of scam

TOPEKA – Kansas Insurance Commissioner Sandy Praeger is advising insurance agents throughout the state to be wary of telephone imposters posing as insurance department regulators to obtain clients' confidential personal information.

Several state insurance departments (not including Kansas) have reported incidents of scammers calling insurance agents and representing themselves as employees of that state's insurance department.

"These scammers have then threatened cancellation or suspension of the agents' licenses for filing improper paperwork," Commissioner Praeger said. "They want the agents to give them Social Security, credit card and telephone numbers, as well as birth dates, to 'rectify' the situation." Insurance departments in Oklahoma, Idaho, Nevada and California have reported these attempts, she said. "Most Kansas agents realize that with our department's electronic filing capability for agents and brokers, the instances of such scams being successful are probably rare," Commissioner Praeger said. 'They know their information is safe because they sent it to us electronically. But any agent or agency who has been contacted with a questionable request for personal information should contact our Producers Division by calling (785) 296-3071."

The highlight of this week occurs on Tuesday evening. It's the sun's last day in Cancer, which coincides with the Cancer new moon and the second solar eclipse of the year.

Because of this, the emphasis is solidly placed important woman in the news.
