Denver man faces federal charge over al-Qaida plot

ment task force feared Zazi may have been involved in a potential plot involving hydrogen peroxide-based explosives like those cited in an intelligence warning issued last week, according to two law enforcement officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to speak about the investigation.

On Monday, federal officials reminded law enforcement across the country that rail and transit systems can be vulnerable to terrorist attacks.

In a joint assessment, the FBI and Homeland Security Department warned that improvised explosive devices are the most common tactic to blow up mass transit and rail systems overseas. And they noted incidents where home-made bombs made with various types of peroxide.

In the assessment, obtained by The Associated Press, officials recommended that transit system security officials conduct random sweeps at terminals and stations and that law enforcement make random patrols and board some trains and buses.

Zazi and his 53-year-old father, Mohammed Wali Zazi, were arrested Saturday in Denver. Ahmad Wais Afzali, 37, was arrested in New York, where he is an imam at a mosque in Queens.

The three are accused of making false statements to the government. The Zazis were scheduled to appear in federal court in Denver on Monday. Afzali was to appear Monday in federal court in New York. If convicted, they face eight years in prison.

The younger Zazi has publicly denied being involved in a terror plot. His attorney, Arthur Folsom, dismissed as "rumor" any notion that his client played a crucial role.

Mohammed Zazi and Afzali are accused of lying to FBI agents about calls between Denver and New York. An affidavit accuses Afzali of lying about a call in which he told Najibullah Zazi that he had spoken with authorities.

Zazi's father is accused of lying when he told authorities he didn't know anyone by the name of Afzali. The FBI said it recorded a conversation between Mohammed Zazi and Afzali.

Prosecutors have said they're not seeking to detain Zazi's father. It was unclear whether they would seek to detain Afzali, who has worked as an informant for New York police.

Carl Tobias, a University of Richmond law professor who tracks such investigations, said authorities could have made the arrests because they feared too much information was getting to the suspects. Additional charges could be filed later, he said.

Ron Kuby, Afzali's attorney, has said the government may have been forced to act after Najibullah Zazi went to New York. Zazi has said he drove there in September to resolve issues with a coffee cart he owns in Manhattan.

Kuby said Monday that his client had fully cooperated with the FBI, and was aware all along that his phone calls were being monitored.

"Why in the world is he going to lie about the content of a conversation that he knew was being taped?" Kuby said outside the Brooklyn courthouse where Afzali was to appear later in the day.

He accused authorities of trying to make Afzali a scapegoat for a botched investigation.

"The government wants somebody to blame for the fact that they haven't caught any terrorists," he said.

An arrest warrant affidavit alleges Zazi admitted to FBI agents that he received instruction from al-Qaida operatives on subjects such as weapons and explosives. It also says he received the training in the federally administered tribal areas of Pakistan.

The FBI said it found images of handwritten notes on a laptop containing formulas and instructions for making a bomb, detonators and a fuse. Zazi told the FBI that he must have unintentionally downloaded the notes as part of a religious book and that he deleted the book "after realizing that its contents discussed jihad."

An affidavit says the handwriting on the notes appeared to be Zazi's. It also says they were e-mailed in December as an attachment between accounts believed to be owned by Zazi, including an account that originated in Pakistan.

FBI agents say Najibullah Zazi traveled to Pakistan twice this year. Zazi says he was visiting his wife, who lives in the Peshawar region.

Zazi was born in Afghanistan, moved to Pakistan at age 7 and emigrated to the United States in 1999. He returned to Pakistan in 2007 and 2008 to visit his wife, according to Folsom.

Aaron Donovan, spokesman for the Metropolitan Transportation Authority, said the MTA was in touch with the New York City area's joint terrorism task force, but wouldn't comment Monday on any communications it had received from the NYPD or FBI. The agency operates the city's subways — carrying about 8 million daily riders — and commuter rail lines.

Council offers community grants to mark statehood anniversary

The Kansas Humanities Council is expanding grant opportunities for Kansas nonprofit organizations in preparation for Kansas 150, the commemoration of Kansas Statehood in 2011.

Starting this fall and continuing through Fall 2011, Kansas 150 grants will provide money to organizations that bring community members together to discuss the last 150 years and to invite ideas about the next 150.

These grants are designed to connect people with Kansas' ideas, places and history through museum exhibitions, panel discussions, heritage walking tours, oral history, digitization of historic material, web site development, podcasts and other projects that strengthen our community, encourage humanities discussions and connect our past with our future. New for next year will be a Short Film grant category available to Kansas filmmakers for shorts telling a Kansas story.

2009-2010 grant deadlines are Oct. 16, April 16, July 30 and Nov. 24, 2010. Guidelines are available at www.kansashumanities.org.

Temptation can pile on unneeded debt

MANHATTAN — Would-be home buyers who are approved for a loan can often benefit from restraint, a Kansas State University financial specialist said.

A prospective lender may be looking at the best-case scenario, with a two-income household maintaining or improving their financial outlook, said Carol Young, K-State Research and Extension financial management specialist.

With job losses, layoffs and furloughs, spending less, within the low- to middle-range of the approved amount, should free-up money for extras, such as appliances needed to complete the kitchen or do the wash, without adding extra stress," she said.

"Buying more house than you need typically adds expense," said Young, who listed costs to heat, cool and furnish unneeded space and a hefty tax bill.

Buying at the top of your price range also can put a damper on savings for other priorities, including an emergency fund to sustain the family in the event of change in employment status, illness or injury, Young said.

Information on managing money successfully is available on Extension Web sites: www.ksre.ksu.edu and www.ksre.ksu.edu/financialmanagement.
