Senate approves official apology to Native Americans in defense bill

years of "ill-conceived policies" and acts of violence against Native Americans by the U.S. government.

Lawmakers said the resolution, which was included in a defense spending bill approved late Tuesday, was a symbolic gesture meant to promote healing and a renewed commitment to tribal communities. It was introduced by Kansas Republican Sam Brownback and Democrat Byron Dorgan of North Dakota.

Brownback has pushed for the measure since 2004. The Senate approved a similar resolution in 2008 as part of a bill to increase the budget for Indian health care, but the measure died in the House. Lawmakers are also developing a law to improve health care and bolster public safety on reservations.

The current apology resolution is careful to state against the U.S. government or serve as a settlement Sen. John Thune, R-S.D.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate has approved of any claim. It "recognizes that there have been a resolution apologizing to American Indians for years of official depredations, ill-conceived policies and the breaking of covenants by the federal government regarding tribes," and "apologizes on behalf of the people of the United States to all Native Peoples for many instances of violence, maltreatment and neglect inflicted on" American Indians.

It urges President Barack Obama to "acknowledge the wrongs of the United States against Indian tribes" in order to encourage healing.

Lawmakers who represent large tribal communities said it should not stand in place of additional federal aid for health care and public safety.

"Native Americans deserve an apology, but they deserve much more than that," said Sen. Tim Johnson, D-S.D.

"The real issue, I think, is what are we doing to that it is not meant to authorize or support any claim improve the conditions on the reservations," said

• Messages to members' doctors and other providers, family members and friends informing them about the directives.

• Automatic notification if state laws or requirements change in a way that requires person to update their directives.

• A national legal support network that verifies that directives are legal and accurate.

"It's purely about what kind of care you want when you can no long take care of yourself," said Brouthers. "You can get access to your directives using toll-free numbers from anywhere in the world."

This means family and friends will not have to grapple with life-and-death decisions based on what they think their loved one would have wanted, said Brouthers.

He said the process is behind schedule. He said the building for the call center at 455 N. Franklin Ave. is basically finished except for a few leaky windows. Refurbishing the building cost the company more than expected, he said, and the firm ended up spending about $100,000 over the budget.

The City Council originally approved giving the firm $400,000 to renovate and buy the building, said City Manager Carolyn Armstrong. She said the council gave an extra $81,815, with the firm covering the rest, when it became apparent the project would cost more than expected.

"It really complicated the project," Brouthers added.

The company hired Strait and Associates in Colby to refurbish the building. Owner Glenn Strait said the building was in sad structural condition, worse than expected.

"It was not consistent with structurally sound practices of today," he said. "We had to rework the structure of the building. We added 38 columns with supplement beams over them to stabilize the structure."

Brouthers conceded that it probably would have been less expensive to tear down the building and build a new one in its place.

"The fact is that the American public has shown that it does not want to have slaughtering of these animals," he said.
