that should be recycled, he said, because it's against the law to burn them. However, Jumper said, Jumper said, "and one person can the landfill should not be a recycle drop off.

Jumper said he thinks it's better to take a proactive stance now on recycling rather than wait and react when it is too late to save the landfill.

"Colby is a progressive town, and the more we build, the more landfill materials we will get," he said "The more people we have, the more trash we will have. The daily average goes up by half a ton a year, and if we think it's expensive now, wait until we exceed our limit."

The county's license is "small, arid landfill," Jumper said. To improve the site and get it licenses for more capacity, he said, would cost more than the county could afford.

Jumper said he thought the commissioners had been proactive concerning the landfill, and the whole county has benefited it.

Seemingly simple things like grain dust have a place to go besides the landfill, he said. At one time there was no charge to dump grain dust even though they were getting it every day. When the county instituted a "tipping fee" access to the city-owned property.

on grain dust, the hauler started He said his discovery demonshipping it to a plant it could be strated that the contamination was made into livestock feed.

Landfill nearing dump limit

"Recycling is the answer," make a difference."

The landfill dodged one bullet nearly a decade ago, he said, when he was able to show that groundwater contamination in the area caused from dry cleaning solvents that didn't come from the county operation. At the time, the city of Colby administered the landfill, and individuals from out in the county were welcome to use it to get rid of their trash.

A well-sampling reading the end of April 2000 showed contaminants to be barely under the allowable limit of its maximum contaminant level. It was over the limit by October 2002, he said, and the landfill was given two weeks to close.

Jumper gathered and compiled information, investigated, interviewed landfill employees and submitted his findings to the Kansas Department of Health and Environment.

What he discovered, was that allegedly a truck from Colorado had been bringing barrels of drycleaning solvent to the landfill to dump it there. There was no gate at that time, so anyone could have due to outside sources, and the department gave the landfill the goahead to remain open. That one was a little too close for comfort, he said.

After discovery of the contaminant, he said, the city turned the property over to the county for $1 in January of 2001.

Jumper says that being out of compliance with the state and federal government on landfill regulations would put the whole county in a tizzy, so to buy more time and to help preserve the future of the landfill, he has gotten the OK from the commissioners to raise landfill fees.

The commissioners agreed in December to raise fees to discourage unnecessary use of the facility. The new fees went into effect Jan. 1.

The charge for cardboard is $35 a ton with a $5 minimum, he said. The minimum on regular trash has gone from $32 a ton to $35 to commercial haulers. For people who bring a small amount, however, there is no charge. The charge for construction and demolition debris is $35 a ton with a $4 minimum.

For information, call the landfill at (785) 462-8139.
