At noon Monday, with the markets closed for Memorial Day and tourists filling Wall Street, Bonnetain was outside when he suddenly saw "thousands of bees flying around." Pedestrians stopped

Bee swarms have popped up in the city for years in spring, usually in search of homes after a new queen emerges and an existing hive becomes overcrowded.

It was the third time in a year 'We had 15,000 girls who that a swarm swept through Manhattan.

> On a Saturday afternoon in May busiest shopping areas, a sign in the window of the GameStop announced: "Closed due to bee infestation." Upstate New York became this gang's country abode.

And last June, bees tried to settle on Manhattan's Upper East Side. One Sunday, at least 8,000 of them were spotted flying up busy Lexington Avenue. They had built a hive in a tree, and when the queen went sightseeing, the entire swarm followed.

Again, Planakis came to the rescue, with onlookers applauding. That winged colony also was hauled off to Connecticut.

Township roads in bad shape

He said he would like to know who ensures that the township boards to do their job or follow the rules they are sworn to when they take office. He wants to know if they are putting out a notice to the public about the meetings and if the board members' roads are the only ones that are getting worked on. He said the state laws governing township say that boards are not to work just their own roads.

"I told the board that our family has a sand pit and that we will furnish the sand for our roads if they'll put enough on to do some good," Baird said, "but all we are told is that we'll be put on the list. The people of Barrett Township just want some decent roads."

Commissioner Paul Steele said maybe the county should consider combining parts of Barrett with East Hale and Rovhol townships to try to help solve the road situation.

The commissioners gave Baird the telephone number to the state attorney general's office so he could try to get answers to some of his questions.

In other business, the commissioners:

Adams, Brown, Beran and Ball, that they were paying Landfill Supervisor Larry Jumper wrong. Since he is a salaried employee, his job of covering the old cell at the landfill, which would normally be done by outside contractors, does not qualify for overtime pay, the auditors said, but he could be paid by the project.

The county purchased heavy equipment to cover the cells so it could avoid hiring outside contractors for the projects.

The commissioners agreed that to avoid setting a precedent, they would have an agreement in writing for each of the extra projects at the landfill that would normally require outside contractors.

• Read a letter from the city of Colby saying that the county is violating a city code - Chapter 13, Article 212 – by pumping water from the race track detention pond onto Range Avenue. The letter said there was an agreement between Road Supervisor Clair Schrock and racing contractor Kerry Wark to pump the water slowly to avoid flooding streets, but that it had not been complied with this year.

The letter asked the county to

• Learned from their auditors, find an alternative for draining and disposal of water from the basin and send the proposal to the city public works office for approval.

> • Approved a letter to be sent by the register of deeds to offices that use plat maps noting that her office can no longer copy anything bigger than a 11-by-17inch size.

> • Denied a request from the county treasurer to continue closing her office at 3:30 p.m. The commissioners urged her to close at the regular 4 p.m. time and to try her best to get the books closed and employees out of the office by 5.

> · Approved a grant application for the heating and cooling project.

> • Received a lower projected outlook for 2010 sales tax revenue, which will affect the 2011 budget. Commissioner Steele said the county can expect to take in $738,090 this year, about $100,000 short of earlier projections. He said he based the figure on returns from the first five months of the year.

> • Set June meetings for Monday, plus June 14, 21 and 30. The commissioners meet at 9 a.m. in their room on the main floor of the courthouse.
