Department to test roads this week

This week, the Kansas Department of Transportation will be conducting pavement evaluation tests on parts of K-161, K-25, and U.S. 24 in Cheyenne, Rawlins, and Thomas counties, using a pilot car to control traffic.

These annual tests measure the quality of the pavement, said Kristen Brands, district manger of public affairs. Work will be done in four-mile segments. Drivers can expect a delay of 15 minutes or less.

For questions, contact Brands at (785) 877-3315 or kristenb@ ksdot.org.

moved northeast through Kansas from Tribune to Phillipsburg, bringing with them heavy rains, high winds, hail and several tornadoes.

Most of reports to the weather service came from Logan and Gove counties, according to the service's storm report. The Gove County sheriff's office reported a funnel cloud with a disturbance on the ground directly beneath it at 5:50 p.m. near Monument Rock. Spotters and storm chasers noted several more funnels at the same location later in the evening. A tornado was also reported at the south end of Logan County.

Parts of Gove County got as much as 1.26 inches of rain. At 7:15, a weather spotter reported 5 inches of water running over U.S. 83 near the Smoky Hill River at Elkader and many roads were flooded near Russell Springs. Spotters reported hail up to 1 inch in diameter northwest of Leoti and south of the town of Gove.

The service is predicting highs in the 80s and 90s today and the rest of the week, with possible severe thunderstorms tonight and Tuesday night.

This small funnel, which National Weather Service experts say may have been a large dust devil or "gustnado," formed for a few seconds at the leading edge of a thunderstorm over a field south of Colby on Sunday.
