The remaining five board members will face re-election in 2012.

Medford is concerned the board is not paying enough attention to how the state's 293 districts are spending taxpayer dollars. While setting curriculum standards is important, he doesn't think it should be the sole focus.

"If they can impose their professional will as a state board on the particular districts on those issues, why not other issues," Medford said. "In my opinion, they have abdicated their responsibility."

The board's stated goals for 2009 through 2011 are aimed at student achievement, focusing on leadership in each school building, strong teachers in the classroom and coordinating learning with parents, educators and other interested parties.

Nowhere, however, do the goals mention school funding or making certain that districts are being efficient with state and local revenues. Kansas spends more than $3 billion education, the largest segment of the state's general fund budget. As some politicians have to Norton is by far the biggest project I've ever personally undertaken," she said. "After my Wall in Alma, Neb., we decided we would try to bring it here. "The Norton County Arts Council agreed to be the sponsor but we needed the help of the community. After an organizational meeting, a committee was formed. The only goal we have is to give our Vietnam veterans the honor and respect they deserve. We have been meeting since February to make sure we do everything we can to make the week of Sept. 23-27 special for our veterans and our community."

One of the requirements to host the wall is to have someone at the wall 24 hours a day. These people will assist visitors in locating names on the wall, making rubbings of names and helping at the hospitality tent. Jon Wyatt, director of the Norton Legion Riders, said the riders will be one of the groups volunteering. The Norton Lions Club built a platform on the east lot of "Bringing the Moving Wall Prairie Land Electric. The utility company is providing lighting and electricity to the site.

Opening ceremonies will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday. Families of fallen soldiers will receive special recognition and will take part in a wreath laying ceremony. At 7 p.m. Friday the Norton American Legion will conduct a service to honor the Vietnam Veterans. At 7 p.m. Saturday evening the Vietnam Veterans of America will host a special Prisoner of War-Missing In Action candlelight ceremony and at 7 p.m. Sunday evening, the Norton County Ministerial Alliance will have an interdenominational church service.
