like a business card, can leave it at the chamber office or the museum. They can also get in touch with Mr. Addleman at 475-2123.

When the time capsule was opened 25 years ago, there was a new capsule put in to be opened 25 years later and 100 years later.

Although the 25-year-old capsule will be opened, the new one will not be buried on Saturday.

Part of the celebration will be a quilt show put together by quilters and quilt owners across the county.

Ruth Miesner, who is helping organize the show, said the quilts have either to have been made by someone who lives in Decatur County or owned by someone who lives here. The group would like both old and new quilts.

Mrs. Miesner said the theme will be something along the lines of “Quilts through our history.” They would like to have around 125 pieces, including quilts, quilted garments, table runners and wall hangings.

The group will start accepting quilts at 4 p.m. Thursday on the east side of the Golden Age Center downtown. Owners will complete entry forms so each of the pieces

Candidates named in search for new justice

JOHN HANNA
Associated Press Writer

TOPEKA – Two appellate judges and a trial judge were named Tuesday as finalists for an opening on the Kansas Supreme Court, even while a federal lawsuit challenges how the state selects members of its highest court.

The Supreme Court Nominating Commission announced it narrowed 13 applicants to state Court of Appeals Judges Nancy Caplinger and Tom Malone and Lyon County District Judge Merlin Wheeler.

Gov. Mark Parkinson, a Democrat leaving office in January, has until Nov. 27 to make the appointment. The high court has a vacancy because of the Aug. 3 retirement of Chief Justice Robert Davis, who died the next day.

Four Kansas voters are suing the nominating commission in federal court, alleging their rights are being violated because lawyers unfairly dominate the selection process. But a federal judge refused two weeks ago to issue an order blocking attorney-members of the nominating commission from participating.

Malone and Caplinger were appointed to the Court of Appeals by Gov. Kathleen Sebelius, a Democrat – Malone in April 2003 and Caplinger, in October 2004. Both are standing this year for retention to the Court of Appeals for four-year terms.

Caplinger, 50, of Topeka, served as a federal prosecutor for nine years and was director of the division handling appeals for the U.S. attorney's office in Kansas. Malone, 56, of Wichita, is a former Sedgwick County district judge.

Wheeler, 58, of Emporia, was appointed to the district court bench in 1990 by Gov. Mike Hayden, a Republican. Wheeler has been chief judge for the 5th Judicial District of Lyon and Chase counties since 1997.
