double ignited a four-run eighth inning and the Colorado Rockies went on to beat the Chicago Cubs 9-5 Sunday for their eighth victory in nine games.

With the score tied at 5, the Rockies sent 10 batters to the plate in the eighth to break the game open. Ryan Spilborghs began the inning with a single off Mateo (0-1) and Jose Lopez doubled, breaking out of an 0-for-18 skid.

After Jose Morales and pinchhitter Ty Wiggington each fanned on wicked sliders by Mateo, Fowler lashed Mateo's 2-2 offering to the lead. Jonathan Herrera and nicely."

"He tried to get ahead of me Marcos Mateo. He didn't miss the with the fastball, but his slider is his go-to pitch," Fowler said. "I Fowler's two-out, two-run swung through one, but I just had to stay patient. He threw another and I just wanted to put the barrel on it and do something with it."

He did enough to help Colorado bounce back from a rare early season loss the day before, 8-3 to the Cubs.

"We have a bunch of different weapons and we can hurt you a bunch of different ways," Fowler said. "I'm just happy it was my turn. And it was important to come off (Saturday's loss) like we did. It shows the character of the team. We had lost a couple of close games, but that was our first right center to give the Rockies real blowout. We bounced back
