Proposed walking trail moving closer to reality pool and high school, Evans said, reaching into as many neighborhoods as possible.

"It would be a safe way for kids to get out there (to the pool)," she said. Surfacing might be something other than concrete, she said, but would accommodate walkers and bikers. Some areas might focus on memorial gifts from area families.

Evans said people can get behind the effort three ways:

• Tell everyone about the plan and drum up support.

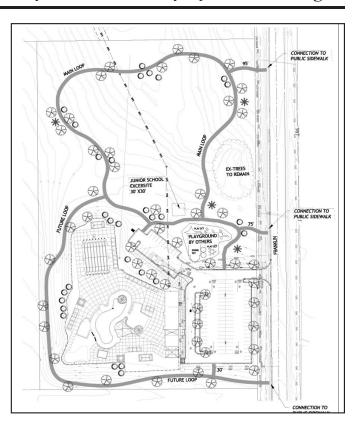

• Donate cash to help pay the cost. While the team has as much as $21,000 promised, she said, Woofter estimated the cost of concrete alone at $75,000. The Thomas County Community Foundation has set up a "pass-through" fund to take tax-deductible donations for the trails, said Executive Director Melinda Olson.

• Volunteer to help build, plant, clean up and maintain the trails. The city and Tree Board will pitch in, but the group needs lots of volunteer labor to make things work on a tight budget.

Evans said the Wellness Committee has donated $20,000 for the trails, the city will provide land for Phase I loops and a $24,275 grant from the Kansas Health Foundation will pay for the "exercite," a people counter, a contract with a trail designer and meeting to promote the plan. The activities center has a $1,000 grant from the Walmart Foundation for the effort.

The city, she added, has $75,000 for playground equipment, but that will cost about $100,000. At least $25,000 more will be needed to complete that area.

"As you can see, we're a little short," she said, "but if we want to do it, we can get it done. In Colby, we can do what we set our minds to. We just have to get started, and it'll go."

Gatz finished by handing out copies of both the U.S. and Kansas Constitutions.

In other business:

• Cindy Cersovsky brought more information on disaster insurance for the power plant. The power plant has only ever had mechanical breakdown insurance on the generators, said City Manager and sales tax revenue from within Carolyn Armstrong, and the city asked Cersovsky to get quotes for includes Bosselman Travel Stop, additional coverage.

Cersovsky said the coverage would cost the city $26,150 annually, about half the initial estimate. It would cover disasters such as fire, hail or vandalism.

Taylor said the Federal Emergency Management Agency would provide money for any disaster the city is likely to face if the county is declared a disaster area. Adrian said that amount would likely be less now with recent government budget cuts.

Taylor said most of what would happen to the power plant would be mechanical failure, which is already covered.

and wind, and get back to them. • Theron Froggatte of Oppenheimer and Co. reported on the $1.13 million bond sale for the Willow Avenue improvements. Any investment banks who wanted to bid were contacted and sent information, he said, and the city got a low bid of 3.54 percent interest from Country Club Bank of Prairie Village.

Froggatte said these bonds will be paid back using property tax the tax increment district, which Wendy's and Hampton Inn.

The council approved an ordinance and a resolution authorizing the issuance of the bonds.

• City Recreation Director Stacey Lee made her annual report to the council. The Recreation Commission has 34 programs over the course of the year, she said, and they are always looking for new ones. Programs include Tae Kwon Do, fitness activities, cooking, basketball and volleyball camps, youth basketball, softball, T-ball and swimming lessons.

• The council approved expanding the Wildlife and Parks Department program at Villa High Lake The council asked Cersovsky to into a Community Fisheries Asget a quote on basic disaster cov-sistance Program. Under the new erage, which would include fire agreement, the department gives the city $1,822 on April 1 and the new pool. $607 on Oct. 1 to buy fish for the lake. In return the city has to do though 10 percent would be reaat least $1,822 of maintenance on the lake.

The vote was unanimous. Councilman Mark Beringer described the program as a "no brainer." • The council discussed giving

From "ISSUE," Page 1 greater extent than just the money that goes through the formula, the amount of money that is expended the educational experience for all Kansas children."

"The governor has always seen the discussion about education suitability and the school finance the way the state distributes aid to schools for stuformula as something that would happen over the next two years," Jones-Sontag said.

House Speaker Mike O'Neal has led his chamber's efforts to change the definition of suitability to show the courts that the state is paying its fair share. He says there are other sources of money that the court isn't necessarily considering when calculating the total school bill.

"In my view, we already have in the statutes what we are asking the schools to do in the way of curriculum," said O'Neal, a Hutchinson Republican. "Our emphasis is on having the court recognize to a on a per pupil basis.'

One of the bills still in the House would change dents considered at risk of failing. The change would distribute extra money based on student performance on state assessments, not eligibility for free or reduced-priced lunches as it is now.

Other bills would allow districts to tap reserve accounts, and count that money as part of the state's overall effort.

"All of these are part of a scheme to prop up base state aid," O'Neal said.

The base is expected to be cut by as much as $250 per student, going from $4,012, to $3,762.
