

Pickin' on the Plains brings summer fun here

Action at last year's Pickin' on the Plains Bluegrass and Folk Festival, clockwise from far right:

Rachel Johnson Boyd, with the Darin and Brooke Aldridge Band, played the fiddle last year during the Pickin' on the Plains Bluegrass Festival in Colby. The Darin and Brooke Aldridge Band is not returning to the festival this year, but three new bands have joined the concert lineup.

A young girl tried to get a cool drink from a drop off a hose at the fairgrounds. Soft drinks and snacks are available from vendors around the grounds.

Marshal Allen Bailey from Dodge City, who claims to be a real marshal, serves as emcee for the festival and plans to sit in on the Bluegrass Gospel Homecoming on Sunday.

Bill and Karen Summers donated this Blueridge guitar to last year's festival. Bill died in June, but another guitar will raise money in a raffle this year.

And if you're hungry, food and drink are available from vendors set up around the fairgrounds. Come on out and have a good ol' country time.

