Trey Schwarz fought for the ball in a Golden Plains High School boys junior varsity game Feb. 10 against Weskan. Schwarz led the team with 10 points and contributed 3 in the varsity game. Helping out of the floor were Tom Koubek (No. 25), Jose Bermudez (No. 15), Benny Martinez (No. 40) and Domonic Luna (No. 11).

The junior varsity boys from Golden Plains fell to the Weskan Coyotes in Rexford following a full four quarters of basketball action.

The hometown Bulldogs put in 5 points during the first quarter of play Feb. 10 with 4 of those coming from Camron Spresser and a free throw from Benny Martinez. In the second quarter, the only 2 points for the Bulldogs came from Trey Schwarz late in the quarter as the Coyotes led 24-7 at the half.

Coming back some in the third, Schwarz continued to lead the boys on the floor as he played aggressively and confidently, putting in 3 more points. Those points and a three-point shot from Jose Bermudez were the only points posted on the Bulldog side of the scoreboard for the quarter.

The Bulldogs then added 9 more points in the fourth with 4 from Spresser and 5 from Schwarz. The Golden Plains defense held the Coyotes to 7 in the fourth, but the Coyotes still took home the win 35-22.

Schwarz finished the game with 10 points and Spresser finished with 8. Bermudez brought home 3 along with 1 from Martinez.

"It was a fun and exciting game," Spresser said. "We didn't have Joseph but we still played hard."

The junior varsity boys currently hold a record of 4 wins and 7 losses as they look forward to playing games at Cheylin, Healy and against Northern Valley to finish out their season.

"I've enjoyed playing JV this year with the freshmen and everyone else," Spresser added.

Lady Bulldogs junior varsity holds on for 18-16 victory

The Golden Plains Lady Bulldogs junior varsity basketball team won a close two-quarter game against the Lady Coyotes from Weskan on the Rexford floor.

The girls played a fervent first quarter Feb. 10, leading 8-5 going into the second. As the girls played the second 8 minutes, they continued to hustle, led in part by sophomore Paulita Ramirez in both aggressive action and successful shooting.

With a two-point basket from MiKayla Lobato, the girls' lead extended to 10-5 before the Lady Coyotes fought their way back, closing the game to 10-8.

A basket from Ramirez extended the Lady 'Dogs' lead to 12-8, but the Weskan girls tied it up at 12.

Macayla Easton put the home team back on top with another two-point basket and Ramirez extended the lead to 16-12. Weskan hit a shot and it was back to a two-point game.

Easton hit another shot with a pass from Rachael Ritter only to be answered by Weskan with 36 seconds left to play.

With 12 seconds on the clock, Weskan called timeout and returned to the floor in possession of the ball. Bulldog defense pressured the Lady Coyotes and they threw the ball out of bounds.

With three-tenths of a second on the clock, Golden Plains gained possession and held on for the 18-16 win.

"The JV has gotten so much better as the season continued, having won three of their last four games," Ramirez said. "They work better together as a team as they have gained experience on the court. Playing in the JV games has helped all the girls play more confidently in the varsity games."

The win left the junior varsity with a 5-5 record.

Lady Trojans rodeo team finishes third at K-State

By Jim Latoski

Colby Community College

The Colby Community College women's rodeo team capped off an exciting weekend of college rodeo at the Kansas State University Rodeo in Manhattan from Feb. 17 to 19 by taking third place, missing second by a mere 5 points.

The Colby rodeo team, under coaches Allen Russell and Chris Sherman, competes in the Central Plains Region, the largest in the United States. The K-State Rodeo included 26 college teams from Kansas, Oklahoma and Missouri with a total of 578 entrants.

Two Lady Trojans enjoyed their best weekends of the year. Competing against 53 other entrants in goat tying, sophomore Samantha Fooks, Tribune, finished second in the first round, sixth in the final round and fifth in average.

Freshman barrel racer Chelsea Buckingham from Leon, Iowa, made her second final round of the year. She finished fourth in the first round, third in the final round and third in average out of 120 contestants.

Both have made an excellent start in pursuing their goal of reaching the College National Finals Rodeo held in Casper, Wyo., each June.

Sophomore Lucas Jones, Broken Bow, Neb., and freshman Lindsey Estes, Leoti, also had solid weekends in calf roping and breakaway roping. They both broke the barrier (leaving the roping box too quickly), which kept them from making it back into the final round.

Coach Russell said he is excited about the progress being made by his riders, and is especially happy with the performance of the women's team this weekend.

The team was on the road again at the Garden City Community College Rodeo from Friday through Sunday.

KU player emerges as top candidate

LAWRENCE — Bill Self remembers having arguments with his own kids over who was better, Magic Johnson or Larry Bird, and the Kansas coach always went with the pride of French Lick.

The reason was simple: The Lakers simply oozed talent, so Johnson didn't receive the sole attention of opposing defenses.

That's why Self also goes with Thomas Robinson, the third-ranked Jayhawks' star forward, when the debate turns to national player of the year.

Anthony Davis has had a sublime season for top-ranked Kentucky, but he's surrounded by a cast of characters capable of 20 points a night.

Without Robinson, the Jayhawks could be sitting on the NCAA tournament bubble.

Naturally, the Wildcats' supporting cast is a big reason John Calipari would vote for Davis.

"At the end of the year, he's going to end up taking 200 shots less than all those guys that they're considering — 200 shots less — yet probably has as big an impact on any of these games," the Kentucky coach said.

Calipari is right that Davis will end up taking far fewer shots than most superstars. He's also right that there are other deserving candidates for player of the year.

Still, Davis and Robinson are leading the pack for the national awards.

In the Wildcats' storied history, no player has landed one of the three major individual honors: the Wooden Award, Naismith Award or AP Player of the Year. Dan Issel didn't do it. Neither did Tony Delk, Jamal Mashburn, John Wall or Tayshaun Prince.

Kevin Durant is the only freshman to win all three trophies in the same season.

The Jayhawks have had their share of stars in recent years: Paul Pierce, Nick Collison, Mario Chalmers and Sherron Collins, to name a few. But they haven't had anybody win national player of the year since Danny Manning won the Naismith and Wooden awards in 1988.

No player from Kansas has won the AP award, which was first handed out in 1961.

So how best to handicap it?

Start with the stats:

Davis is averaging 14.1 points and 9.8 rebounds, and his 66.1 field goal percentage is among the 10 best in the country. The 6-foot-10 forward also has swatted 140 shots, and needs just 31 more blocks to break the SEC record set by Mississippi State's Jarvis Varnado in 2009.

Robinson, meanwhile, is the only player in the Big 12 to average a double-double at 18 points and 11.9 rebounds. He's been even better against ranked teams, averaging 19.8 points and shooting nearly 56 percent against a group of opponents that includes Duke, Baylor and Missouri. Kentucky, too.

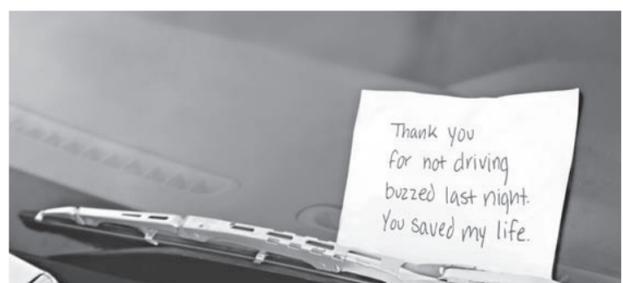

There are plenty of differences in Davis and Robinson.

Davis is long and lean, while Robinson has muscles upon muscles. Davis prefers to work around the rim, using his quickness to get around post defenders, while Robinson has shown an improving mid-range game and the ability to extend defenses all the way to the perimeter.

There are also similarities.

Both prefer to pawn off the attention on their teammates, giving them credit for their own success. Both have become the go-to player when things are going poorly, though that's rarely been the case this season. Both have led their teams to conference championships.

Now, both of them are in the running for player of the year.
