Food and frontier women join fourth grade art for March events

First of all, for all you "Food for Thought" fans who have been discouraged about the disappearing soup and mad scramble for chairs these last two events: We finally get it!

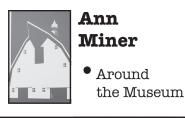

We need to adjust our planning to accommodate 60 to 90 people rather than the 30 we are used to. It's a wonderful problem, of course, to have more people in attendance than were expected.

We have ordered more chairs, bought a few more tables, and plan to have plenty of soup and accompaniments at our next program on Thursday. We also plan to haul out the sound system so our speakers will be easier to hear. So keep coming.

Our March lunchtime program on the 15th will focus on a few of the many stalwart women who settled Thomas County. We are looking forward to hearing Gary Adrian discuss his great-grandmother, Melissa Alger Wallace; Carol Thiel and Judie Withers tell us about the Thiel women; Erin Eicher Matthews share what she's learned about the women in the Eicher family; and Cindy Duffey talk about her ancestors. Many in the audience will no doubt have their own stories to contribute.

We are very excited about our next exhibit, which will begin on Tuesday, March 20, and run through Friday, April 6. Trish Starbuck has had her fourth-grade art students choose a Colby building to draw, and we will be exhibiting the drawings along with information about and photographs of the original buildings.

Included in the exhibit will be short state-Scott; 11 a.m. softball, Butler ments by each of the students as to why they chose a particular building: "I picked the Landmark Church because I like the texture.' "I picked the college because both of my parents work there." "I chose Palace Drug Store because I still go there today for birthday pres-

ANN MINER/Prairie Museum of Art and History Prairie Museum Exhibit books have just been printed.

These charming comments offer us a little insight into the connections our kids have with the places in their community. Kudos to Trish Starbuck for finding a way to incorporate local history into her classes.

The High Plains Art Club members graciously agreed to postpone their exhibit period to accommodate the student exhibit. Their mixed-media works will be on display from Monday, April 9, through the end of May.

The Prairie Museum of Art and History exhibit book is now in print and available at the museum. The 40-page publication contains information on the Kuskas as well as lots of photographs and information about each of the inside galleries and outside buildings, including a four-page spread on the Cooper Barn. Many visitors have asked for a book like this, so we are pleased to finally have it available for outof-towners and Thomas Countians alike.

The old covered wagon from Sod Town arrived on our doorstep in February, and Larry Dilts has been busy stripping it down and repairing/replacing the wood parts that are too rotten to keep. For now it sits where the ABC Gallery once was; that display has been relocated into twelve moveable cases - built by Larry - in the middle of the High Plains Journey space.

Finally, our "Homesteading on the High Plains" trunk is finished and available for checkout by elementary school classes, Girl Scout, Boy Scout and 4-H groups and other interested parties. The trunk contains artifacts. documents, photos and a notebook full of information and activities pertaining to the period from about 1879-1910.

With 2012 being the 150th anniversary of the Homestead Act, it is a good year to explore this important piece of legislation and its impact on settlement out here. Contact the museum at 460-4590 or museumed@st-tel.net for more information.
