an ever-changing and diverse society."

Waites said he would take the revised statement to the committee to make sure it is OK with the members.

Earlier in the meeting, the board heard a report from Crystal Pounds, who is part of the accreditation committee, about the preliminary self-study report the college has to do for the process. The report needs to be sent in by next Friday.

The commission made a visit to the college in 2004 to recertify it, Bev Anderson said, and gave the college a report highlighting areas where it needed to do better. The commission will send a team again in 2014 for the recertification.

Pounds also said five committee members went to the annual

Higher Learning Commission conference in Chicago for five days, where they learned about new standards that the commission created as well as specific topics related to each of their jobs or interests.

Pounds said they learned a lot and did a lot of networking at the conference.

She said they also picked a theme, "You're an Essential Piece," for the site visit in 2014 and will be giving all the college employees training during the fall to tell them which team they will be part of. The college wants to get everyone involved in the process, she said.

Pounds said a student committee has been selected, but it will have faculty and staff to lead its subcommittees. They ask that each of the board members serve on one of those committees as well.

She said the committee set meeting dates on one Friday every other month from 8:30 a.m. to noon for all the employees to meet and work on their part of the project. She also gave the board a calendar of the committee's events.

In other business, the board:

- Gave its consensus to approve the Neighborhood Revitalization Plan, a tax incentive program, which was presented to the trustees by Christy Rocca, director of the Thomas County Economic Development Alliance, and Mayor Gary Adrian.

Board Chair Kenton Krehbiel asked what would happen if someone took advantage of the rebate plan, then moved. Rocca said the tax rebate stays with the property, so the next owner would benefit.

Some vehicle renewal issues resolved

changed from the old vehicle to the new vehicle, the system doesn't recognize this.

She said there have also been some glitches while giving refunds, but the office just has people fill out a form and will send them a check later.

"Each day it gets a little bit better," Applebury said. "Be patient with us, because it does take a little longer to do your paperwork than usual. We would appreciate your patience and understanding."

She said people should know that the staff staggers their lunch periods, so the office is short from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

"A lot of people like to come during their lunch hour, but I'm short staffed during those times," Applebury said. "Maybe if they try to come in different times during the lunch hour, it will be faster."

She added that the treasurer's office is open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The state is implementing a new computer system that will merge vehicle registrations and titles and eventually link to driver's license records. After the meltdown Monday, Revenue Department's Division of Vehicles worked with 3M, supplier of the $40 million system, to fix the problems and restore service.

That caused delays and led to long lines and the closing of some registration stations. The Shawnee County treasurer's office stopped taking new customers by 11 a.m. Wednesday after handing out 300 slips for people to stand in line.

Jordan said residents still could see lines as the agency works through the backlog and more people rush to complete registrations before the end of the month.

The secretary said the number of registrations and titles being processed has grown steadily with the new system and more residents visiting offices. In some cases, treasurers in smaller counties are helping larger counties that have big workloads.

While some people must come into a treasurer's office to handle their vehicle business, many do not, the division noted. It urged people who need to renew their vehicle tags to use the online system at www.ksrevenue.org or just mail renewals to their county treasurer.

The state is giving some people an extra month to renew tags if they get a letter from the treasurer's office. However, Applebury said these grace periods are only for people in large counties that are having to stand in line for five to eight hours or have an issue while getting tags or permits renewed.

If there is an issue while someone is at her office, Applebury said, they have a solution.

"I take down their info and e-mail, or call, the state and they help get the issue resolved," she said. "Then I call them (the patron) and let them know when the issue is resolved and that they can come back."

"We have been very fortunate that they can help us through our problem, but I am a smaller county. They really are encouraging people to mail in their renewal or do it online."

Applebury said renewals for people whose last names begin with H and I are being mailed out. She said people should receive them by the end of the month, since they are due by the end of June.
