college's strategy, which is "aggressively recruit students and financially support payments." Waites boiled it down to "we need more students and more donors."

Chair Arlen Leiker asked why the committee decided on trying to recruit just 2 percent more students each year. Waites said they wanted these goals to be realistic and attainable and conceded that the college may be able to get more than 2 percent next year, but even that much is not a sure

"There's some, I suppose, reluctance ... to not set ourselves up again for some type of failure," Waites said, "and the 2 percent, the growth is indexed on each new year. So in other words, if we go up from 34,000 to 40,000, the next year is 2 percent on top of that 40. ... It recalibrates every year."

Dr. Stephen Vacik, college president, said that looking across the state this year, there was flat enrollment and most schools were down.

Vice President of Student Affairs and Marketing Dr. Keegan Nichols said she thinks it may Barry Kaaz, dean of external affairs, pointed out that goals three through eight support the first goal.

Dean of Academic Affairs it's good that these expectations are in writing and thinks the goals are doable.

"The part I really appreciate is it was done by our people," Vacik said. "We didn't bring in some facilitator who made us put dots up on the board and choose four or five different things, I'm so sick of seeing those dots ... and to me, this I think was much more effective. I think the committee that worked on it felt very good about what they've produced."

Vacik closed the discussion by saying he hopes to send this document out as a draft to all faculty and staff and ultimately, invite the community to come in and look at it when it's pretty much a final draft and get their input as well.

This subject came up when Leiker congratulated Athletic Director Ryan Sturdy on having a 4.0, or straight A, average. Wells said he planned to take this idea to the foundation board last Wednesday.

Wells also reported that the foundation is looking for more approval for the enhancement of the Norton nursing facility and that it has several fund raisers coming up this summer.
