that "stirred the pot" the most the last time the college was considering cutting the program have all of their kids out of the system now.

Shields said he thinks grandfathering current grant recipients in is a good thing, and it wasn't something they were going to do last time this topic was discussed.

Another thing the college will do, Vacik said, is make sure the scholarship money they give out will be used wisely and effectively.

Leiker said his only concern long term is that the college won't be as competitive with other schools if they're not offering more scholarship money each year.

"If we leave it at a flat level," he said, "long term, it won't be Keegan Nichols, vice president good for us ... we can't flat-line here."

Vacik said with a more effective plan for spending scholarship money and bringing in more students, he thinks they will have more money to put back into scholarships.

The trustees agreed with Vacik's thinking and passed the motion to discontinue the grant unanimously.

In other business, the board: Approved the consent agenda with changes in wording in the minutes of the Sept. 17 and Oct. 1 meetings and with the addition of the Norton hospital agreement to the agreements.

The contracts section of the consent agenda passed with a 3-2

of student affairs and marketing, who was asked by trustee Bill Shields about interest in terms of recruitment from high schools so far. She said the programs are seeing more interest, especially nursing. Shields then asked which area Nichols thinks asked what the weakest area is and Nichols said Oklahoma.

Herschberger asked how the "head count" is at the college and Nichols said they are up at least 50 students and 7.7 percent in credit hours from last year. three more are being developed Nichols also said they have 278 now. He said they have about halls, which is up 30 percent the program.

• Heard a report from Dr. from last year and is more than they've ever had on campus. The halls are at capacity, she said, adding that the staff's work has made these numbers possible.

• Heard from Barry Kaaz, dean of external affairs, who was asked by Chairman Arlen Leiker if Kaaz knows how much the Honeywell project is saving the college is having the most the college. Kaaz said he won't luck in, and she said Colorado know about overall savings for and Nebraska have been good as a couple months, but said they well as eastern Kansas. Shields can start doing some analysis on items right now, such as the northeast residence hall and sub-metering.

Shields asked if there are any courses in alternative energy yet, and Kaaz said there are few and students living in the residence 100 credit hours being taken in

Hawker Beechcraft to downsize

WICHITA (AP) - Talks to sell Hawker Beechcraft's operations to China's Superior Aviation Beijing Co. have collapsed and the Wichita plane maker said Thursday that it now plans to emerge from bankruptcy protection as a slimmed down company in the first quarter of 2013.

"Despite our best efforts, the proposed transaction with Superior could not be completed on terms acceptable to the company," said CEO Steve Miller. "We are disappointed that the transaction did not come to fruition, but we protected ourselves by obtaining a $50 million deposit that is now fully nonfundable and property of the company."
