"...It really came down to where we wanted to be located. I like practicing rural health care, and Colby is close to my husband's family in Bartley, Neb. We have found Colby to be a very welcoming, nice town."

Haag said her family is from West Point, Neb.

"The areas of family medicine I enjoy include routine exams, chronic disease management, acute illnesses, pediatrics, diabetes and female care. Patient education is a great part of what I enjoy.

"Helping patients understand what and why we are doing is an important part of my practice. I practice prevention as much as possible, with an emphasis on open relationships. Relationships are important for me and my patients."

Haag and her husband, Lucas, were married Nov. 24. Being a graduate of Kansas State University, she said, she's a Wildcats football fan and enjoys reading, swimming, walking and spending time with family and friends.

Lucas is finishing graduate school at Kansas State and will work at the Northwest Research and Extension Center in Colby.

Haag and the clinic were matched through the Kansas Recruitment and Retention Centerr, which provides placement and retention assistance to rural health organizations abd help providers find a practice in Kansas.

The center is a nonprofit program of Rural Health Education and Services at the University of Kansas Medical Center.

Haag is seeing new patients at the clinic. To make an appointment, call (785) 462-6184.
