Mistletoe not always easy to find in Jersey

By Lee Procida
The Press of Atlantic City
UPPER TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) – Bob and Barbara Fasy might have the most romantic house in Cape May County this holiday season.
The Upper Township couple has a tree in their front lawn that is chock-full of mistletoe, the festive flora of holiday lore that rarely grows in New Jersey.

"I would climb up there and put a red bow around it if I could," Barbara Fasy told The Press of Atlantic City (bit.ly/UPRe3e).
This area is about the farthest north the plant grows in the U.S., whereas it is fairly common in the South. Late fall and winter is the best time to spot it.

Wishing you a safe and joyous

Holiday Season
