Trophy goes to drive-in restaurant

From "TROPHY," Page 1 formed the team.

Romine said she came up with the floating trophy to give the business that raises the most money with its bowling team. Twentytwo teams, including businesses and groups of friends, signed up this year, in a competition that was delayed by a snow storm and then split up over two weekends in March. Colby Bowl and Fun Center was host of the event.

D.J. Lolowang said a good deal of the money the team raised came from the business itself, but they also got donations from friends and family, and asked for some over Facebook.

Other businesses could donate directly to the group without forming a team. Their names were printed on a poster set up in the bowling alley during the competition, and on the T-shirts given out to all the bowlers.

Big Brothers Big Sisters also got some money from regular bowlers. The FireXtrikers, a team in the Colby bowling league, raised $1,004. League teams donated 50 cents for every strike players made, and 25 cents for every spare.

The team FireXtrikers received a traveling trophy last Monday that will stay in the bowling alley. Next year, another team will get a chance to get their name on it.
