Thompson said she went to the University of Kansas and lived in Lawrence for several years, but she was born and raised in Colby and has lived here for most of her life. About 70, she has lived in her house for 50 years. She said the strange collection of lawn ornaments in her yard took about 15 years to gather together.

"I kind of started this when my grandchildren were little," she said, "just maybe a thing or two, but then I kind of got carried awav.'

It takes her about three days to get everything put out in the yard when summer starts, she said. Neighbors have been known to come knocking to see the collection, and Thompson sometimes takes them around the yard in little tour groups. She has dinners and parties there in the summer.

She said she puts her plants in a green house at the side of the yard each fall and retires her stuffed animals after a couple of years of sitting or hanging in the elements. Sometimes, she said, her potted plants and the assortment of items end up sitting in the snow for a short time.

People got her some of the items as gifts, Thompson said. She credited Tina DeBoer, Jo Booth and Ruth Gallaway in particular with helping her build up her collection.

Thompson admitted to getting obsessed with certain hobbies. She has a room in her house with a collection of hundreds of hats which she started several years ago. She wore one that looked like a headband with peacock feathers sticking out of it to show off her garden.

"I think that it's close to being the last year," she said. "I don't know how much longer I'll do this, but it's fun."

jumped on her sleeping husband at 4:30 a.m., batting at him and yowling.

"I always thought we were safe unless the dam went," she said. "I credit the cat with saving my family and the lives of everyone in the cottages."

From the mountain communities east of Estes Park to the plains city of Fort Morgan, pockets of people remained cut off by the flooding. Sunday's rain hampered helicopter searches, and rescuers trekked by ground up dangerous canyon roads to reach some of those homes isolated since Wednesday.

The surging waters have been deadly, with four people confirmed dead and two more missing and presumed dead after their homes were swept away.

Some 1,500 homes have been destroyed and about 17,500 have been damaged, according to an initial estimate released by the Colorado Office of Emergency Management on its website.

cials hoped that number of missing would drop as they contacted more stranded people.

As many as 1,000 people in Larimer County were awaiting rescue Sunday, but airlifts were grounded because of the rain, Rocky Mountain Type 2 Incident Management Team commander Shane Del Grosso said.

Hundreds more people are unaccounted for to the south in Boulder County and other flood-affected areas.

The gateway town of Lyons, about 20 miles southeast of Estes Park, was almost completely abandoned. Emergency crews gave the few remaining residents, some wandering aimlessly on Main Street, looking for status updates from each other, a final warning to leave Sunday.

One man, a bluegrass musician, has been visiting his home every day and taking photos. The house has a river running through it and he can't get close.

In addition, 11,700 people left their completely destroyed. One angry man was throwing his possessions one-by-one into the river rushing along one side of his trailer With phone service being restored to on Sunday, watching the brown water carry

In Estes Park, Lancaster called the flood "a 500-year event." He said it was worse than previous flash floods because of the sustained rains and widespread damage to infrastructure across the Rocky Mountain foothills. Major roads were washed away, small towns like Glen Haven reduced to debris and key infrastructure like gas lines and sewers systems destroyed, meaning hundreds of homes in Estes Park alone could be unreachable and uninhabitable for up to a year.

The good news here in Estes Park and the Estes Valley, Lancaster said, was there appeared to be no loss of life.

Still, hundreds remained stranded in remote areas.

"We know there are a lot of people trapped, but they are trapped alive," he told people gathered at Red Cross evacuation shelter Sunday afternoon.

And rescues continued throughout the day Sunday any way possible, including zip lines rigged to hoist people and pets across swollen rivers and creeks.

That's how retirees Jerry Grove and Dorothy Scott-Grove - and their two golden retrievers - were finally rescued Friday night from their vacation cabin in Glen Haven.
