Flu clinic prepares for seasonal ills

The Thomas County Health Department's Colby flu clinic will be open late tonight for anyone who wants a flu vaccination.

"We're opening earlier and later, so hopefully we can get more people before and after work," said Administrator Kasiah Rothchild.

The clinic will be open in the Thomas County Office Complex until 6 p.m.

This year, Rothchild said, the department staged larger remote clinics at locations outside Colby to practice for a possible disease outbreak. The first was in Brewster on Thursday afternoon, where a total of 65 patients visited, 56 of them in the first hour. The second, in Rexford on Monday, drew 54 patients, the director said.

"It was testing our ability to come set up a clinic quickly and dispense medication," Roth-

Brant Brower rolled up his sleeves for a shot Thursday at the Thomas County Health Department's flu clinic at Brewster Elementary School.

This meant giving up smaller the Brewster Senior Center, she Plains schools. Volunteers wore clinics that used to be held in said. The larger clinics were set neon vests with their job titles the Red Barn in Rexford and up in the Brewster and Golden written on them. Colby Community College nursing students and instructors helped dispense

People from other agencies helped, including Thomas County Emergency Management, the Thomas County Road Department (which helped set up the trailer), the Brewster and Golden Plains school districts, Options and the Retired Senior Volunteer Program. Community volunteers helped out, too, along with the Thomas County commissioners, especially Mike Baughn, former mayor of Brewster, who volunteered at the Brewster clinic.

Rothchild said flu shots were a good way to practice for a disease outbreak. Patients paid or used their insurance cards, and the rest of the cost was paid out of Health Department preparedness funds. If there were an actual disease outbreak, she said, the medication would probably be paid for by the state or federal government.

The deadline for Briefly is noon the day before. Items submitted in the morning will be set up for the following day, space available. The deadline for Monday's paper is noon Friday.

Nursing program needs some change

Colby Community College tions: what the assessment is trustees heard about issues and what was assessed, how it brought up after an inspection of the college nursing program during its meeting earlier this month.

Ruth Wolfram, outgoing director of nursing education, said the program had been visited by representatives of the state Board of Nursing and the National League of Nursing Accreditation Commission earlier. The state board's report came back first, and she reported no negative feedback on it. The league's report, however, said the college must fix three standards out of the six it evaluates.

In the area of faculty, the league said the college needs all its nursing faculty to have master's degrees; the program needs to be subdivided into day and evening classes, and between classes in Colby, WaKeeney and Norton for the "outcome" category because the curriculum assessment had been reported as one group; and finally, the curriculum assessment needs to be changed to ask specific queswas assessed and how it affects the program.

Wolfram said at the meeting Sept. 16 that the faculty are doing what they can to improve the program, but are a little short staffed. Assistant Director Rebecca Johnson has had to take over the duties of an instructor who resigned, she noted. In other business, the board:

Approved contracts for Sarah Borneman, new financial services specialist; Robbyn Lamb, an English instructor; Lorna Pelton, new beef production director; and Anthony Schroer, instrumental music instructor. Also approved were eight paid part-time contracts and 24 parttime contracts with no pay listed, including 22 for community education coordinators in towns across northwest Kansas.

 Approved the resignations of Wolfram, Information Technology Coordinator Brooks Wederski and assistant wrestling coach Tyler Gonzales.
