Cadet's roots in Colby

By Heather Alwin

Holly Victoria Schlotterbeck, granddaughter of William Rikoff of Colby, graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., on May 28, receiving her diploma personally from the president.

Lt. Holly Victoria Schlotterbeck, daughter of Montie and Tonya Schlotterbeck of Gilbert, Ariz., and granddaughter of William and the late Loretta Rikoff of Colby, graduated eighth out of a class of over a thousand students. She was among 40 graduates handed the student with the highest composite stand-their diploma by President Barack Obama. Schlotterbeck graduated from Chandler colby.society@nwkansas.com Preparatory Academy in Arizona in 2010. While at West Point, she earned honors in mechanical engineering.

The academy is a four-year undergraduate liberal arts college on the Hudson River north of New York City which prepares cadets for a career in the Army.

Schlotterbeck received many awards while at the school, including the Superintendent's Award for Excellence and the Superintendent's Gold Star. She also earned the Brig. Gen. Elvin R. Heiberg Memorial Award as ing in applied science and engineering. Schlotterbeck was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Army aviation branch and will report to Fort Rucker, Ala., for training as an Apache helicopter pilot. Schlotterbeck's mother grew up in Colby and graduated from Colby High School. An aunt, Tasha Kuper, and other relatives still live in the area.

Candidate says change needed

By Sam Dieter Colby Free Press sdieter@nwkansas.com

The "tea party" challenger to long-time Kansas Sen. Pat Roberts stopped in Colby on Friday evening, less than a week after a similarly unknown candidate in Virginia knocked off the No. 2 Republican leader in the House, what he plans to do in Washington.

Dr. Milton Wolf, a Leawood radiologist, is the most prominent of three candidates who will go up against the three-term senator in the Republican primary Aug. 5. He said he has never run for political office before, but he has been active, having written columns critical of the current administration for The Washington Times. He said he met politicians such as Texas Sen. Ted Cruz and drew up his own health-care plan to replace Obamacare.

Oddly enough, he added, he is also a cousin of President Barack Obama, whom he met for the first ime four years ago.

tory, and is certainly the worst in our lifetimes.

But he also pointed out that under George W. Bush, the Republicans oversaw the largest expansion of government spending before Obama, as well as a parallel expansion of debt and bank bailouts.

"I think the Democrats are sprinting off a cliff and the Repub-"What are the odds that the next lican seem content to walk off that cliff," he said. Obamacare is the most destructive law passed in our lifetimes, he said, comparing a partial fix to the law to cutting out half a tumor. If must be completely repealed, he ers is planned at Colby Community College next month to celebrate the college's 50th birthday.

The annual Founder's Day celebration for the college will be Saturday, July 12, the 50-year anniversary of the day the college received its charter. Most of the past presidents will speak at the ones scheduled to speak, but Sen. Cultural Arts Center on campus Jerry Moran and his wife Robba, before a reception and ice cream a member of the Kansas Board social.

The ceremonies will start at 3 p.m. at the center with Mayor Gary Adrian reading a proclamation from the City of Colby and one from Gov. Sam Brownback, declaring July 12 to be Colby Community College Day. Comments from past Presidents Richard Mosier, James Tangeman, Mikel Ary and Max Heim will follow.

Past members of the college's Sunflower Singers will provide the entertainment.

Dr. Mosier, the founding president, served from 1966 - after the Colby School Board ran the college for its first two years - until 1972. Dr. Tangeman, who was the dean of students when the college was founded, was one of the longest-tenured presidents in the state, serving from 1972 to 1988.

Dr. Ary served from 1988 until

A day of festivities and speak- 2005, when Skip Sharp took over as interim president until June 2006. Dr. Lynn Kreider served from July 2006 until September 2010. Dr. Heim served as interim president from October of that year until April 2011, when Dr. Stephen Vacik took over.

The presidents are the only of Regents, might also be present, along with Lloyd White, a founding board member, and other founders and former faculty. A reception will follow at 4 p.m., where guests can meet the founders, employees and past presidents.

A community ice cream social will finish the day's events, starting at 5:30 p.m. on campus. A tent will be set up where the ice cream will be served, along with watermelon provided by S&T Communications, cotton candy and drinks.

The Colby Girl Scouts will have carnival games set up for people to play. There will be a photo booth with props and a bouncy house for the kids, all free.

said, or future generations will pay the price. He said he has come up with a replacement, which he calls Patient Care.

A cornerstone of his plan would be to take away the income tax penalty people now must pay for having their own insurance, rather than buying it through their employer. This would make it easier for people to get insurance where they want to get it, Wolf said, adding that he thinks most people would prefer to get it on their own. With this plan, people would be able to change jobs without losing their health insurance.

His plan would also eliminate the Obamacare rule which forces people to get their own insurance plan.

Another main point of Wolf's plan, the candidate said, is to eliminate state and federal regulations which he said force people to pay for coverage they do not need in Kansas. He also would allow people to get insurance for the same price from different states, regardless of where they live.

Another part of Wolf's platform is to physically secure the border to keep out illegal immigrants. If the government expels people from the country without stopping them at border, he said, the same number who were kicked out will be back the next day. He added that he does approve of offering amnesty to illegal immigrants already in the country.

for the rights to life and self- he hates to listen to that. But a defense, and supports school vouchers. A member of the audience asked if he was going to defund public schools, pointing out that private schools do not have to take every child. Wolf responded that he would hope the community would come together to help any child with special needs.

He said a Catholic school in the town of St. Marys spends about $4,500 on each student and is still considered better than the local public school, which spends about $15,000. The U.S. Department of Education itself, he said, is a mistake, adding he would like to "hang a going-out-of-business sign" in front of the department.

In fact, Wolf said, he would like to see all federal agencies, including the Environmental Protection Agency, explain each year why their existence is necessary in order to receive money. He said the biggest danger to a farmer, factory owner or business person is a federal inspector with a clipboard.

The federal government is overstepping its bounds, he said, and Congress is not doing its job to reign in the president and preserve the republic. He pointed out that Obama's executive branch has issued thousands of executive orders which carry the weight of law at the same time that Congress has passed fewer than 100 actual laws.

Because of this, Wolf questioned Roberts' ability to represent Kansas. Many politicians come back here to talk about the Wolf also said he stands failings of others, he said, and politician who has been on the job for 47 years - as Roberts has - owns the problem in Washington.

> Wolf also brought up the question of his opponent's residency in this state, which he said forced him to recuit people to sign a petition to even get his name on the ballot. He pointed out that Roberts' first address when he ran was a dirt lot in Dodge City, and right now his address in this state is a rented bedroom by a golf course in the same town, owned by a campaign donor.

"He's not leveling with you," Wolf said. "He doesn't own a home in Kansas."

Wolf brought up the joke Roberts made recently about his Kansas address, saying there is a recliner he can sleep in whenever he comes back.

"Well, I'm going to give him permanent access to that recliner," Wolf said.

Incumbent members of Congress, he asserted, are ignoring their responsibility to check the power of the rest of the government, hoping someone else will take the blame. He told the audience about Benjamin Franklin's description of the U.S. government as "a republic, if you can keep it."

"That's the question that comes before us today," he said. "Can we keep it?"

Otherwise, he added, "It might have the word America on a map, but it won't be the United States of America we grew up with."

Tornadoes flatten tiny town

By Josh Funk

Associated Press PILGER, Neb. (AP) — As two giant tornadoes bore down on this tiny farming town in northeast Nebraska, Trey Wisniewski heard the storm sirens, glanced out at the blackening sky and rushed with his wife into their basement.

"My wife was holding our animals, and I was holding on to my wife. We could feel the suction try to pull us out of there," he said Tuesday.

Suddenly, their house was gone, leaving them to dodge debris that rained down upon them. And then, the storm that hit so suddenly Monday afternoon was gone, allowing them to emerge and see what was left of the 350-person farming town of Pilger.

Much of the community was gone and two people had died. The disaster, delivered by twin twisters rare in how forcefully they traveled side by side for an extended period, left some residents the town could rebuild, even as they marveled that the death toll hadn't been worse.

a statement that his mother, 42-year-old Kandi Murphree, was in a medically induced coma in Omaha after the tornado destroyed their home.

The other fatality was a motorist, David A. Herout, 74, of Clarkson, Neb. He died in Cuming County, a few miles east of Pilger.

At least 19 people were taken to hospitals.

Up to 75 percent of the buildings in Pilger were heavily damaged or destroyed. The tornado destroyed much of the small downtown, leaving piles of bricks that had been storefronts in the street. Several grain bins on the south end of Main Street were swept away, and others remained crumpled on the ground. Between 45 and 50 homes in Pilger were demolished; about a dozen others were damaged beyond repair in Dixon County.

Homes south and west of downtown fared even worse, with most reduced to piles of debris or gone entirely.

"I am amazed that ... out of all of this destruction only two people were killed," Wisniewski

Deaths

James Harper

Saturday, June 14, 2014, at the Prairie Senior Living complex in Colby.

He was born March 30, 1932, to Bryan "Cute" and Sarah "Sadie" (Ramey) Harper in Colby. He grew up on a farm north of Levant, attended the Mirage Country School and graduated from Colby High School in 1949.

On Feb. 2, 1963, he married Janet Kreutzer.

In 1966, Jim opened the Rusty Bucket, the local entertainment spot for Colby.

A hard worker throughout his life, he had different jobs that challenged him in different ways. His favorite job was working for the National Farmer's Organization where he bought and sold cattle and collected dues all over the United States.

He was a Little League baseball coach and drove the school bus.

The white grubs that turn lawns grubs.

Feeding Damage

In feeding we have to look at the three instars (developmental phases) of grubs. The first and second instar grubs cause minimal damage to grass roots and do less harm to lawns.

The damage comes from the ister of Historic Kansas Places. third instar grubs that are larger and more voracious in feeding on the roots of lawns. Most likely this damage will be seen in September and October and the feeding damage can be more severe in dry, less vigorous turf.

One way to check for grubs is matched by the grant recipient. to grab the turf. If it peels right up with ease, most likely white grubs have eaten off the roots.

Control Tactics

There are two ways to control white grubs: preventive treatments and rescue treatments.

Preventives are applied in situations where the turf owner wants a perfect turf or close to it. There is a routine application of insecticide to prevent grub damage, but the disadvantage is high cost. It's necessary to purchase enough insecticide to treat an entire area and take the chance of buying it even if there isn't a high population of grubs. The timing of application is important for control of annual white grubs because they need to be controlled in the first and second instar to have the most effect. The optimal treatment time in Kansas for white grubs is about Aug. 10 through 20.

Rescue treatments fall in situations where a wait-and-see option is used for control. It is important to check frequently for grubs in the lawn and note areas that look abnormal. Since the grubs have been feeding, you will be able to roll back areas such as these with ease. Often the detection of grubs is too late and the roots are already affected, so using preventive measures will have more success.

A few products that can be purchased to control these grubs are: Sevin, with short residual activity; Merit, Grubex and Mach 2, each with longer residual action.

Long residual activity is generally better as the residue will stay around longer to control the grubs.

If a homeowner wants to have a perfect lawn there are many things to consider with grubs being one. Grubs can devastate a lawn quickly when they are feeding so checking frequently for grubs is good practice and can prevent a problem before it gets too bad.

Most of these products can be found at local stores that sell garden supplies. For more information stop by the extension office and talk to me or call at 460-4582.

Irmalee (Lee) Fleckenstein

She was born on August 23, 1925, in Center, Colorado, the daughter of the late Oliver Ross and Josephine (Fulton) Buckley. Irmalee graduated from the Center Consolidated School in 1943.

During WWII, she and several of her Colby friends formed a group to correspond with the troops. They spent many heartfelt hours sending support from home in the form of letters and care packages. They were fondly known as the "Gals about Town." How rewarding, when the troop trains stopped in Colby. The young men and women were fed home cooked meals, relaxed playing games with the locals and were given a sack lunch.

This was the beginning of Lee's commitment to community service. She was a member of the Board of Directors for the Comprehensive Mental Health Clinic in Hays; President of the Thomas County Medical Steering Committee for Drug Abuse; a member of the Kansas State Board of Directors for the Kansas Mental Health Association, and was active in the Thomas County Alcohol and Drug Abuse Council (ADAC).

Lee's life-long passion for learning included continuing education programs with the universities of Oklahoma, Utah and Kansas. She proudly earned a college degree in 1983.

Lee loved oil painting classes, home decorating, music and beautiful things. She enjoyed walking her 'rascal' dog Murphy and golfing with her friends.

'Aunt Lee' was lovingly involved in the lives of her nieces, nephews, grand-nieces and grand-nephews. They were a joy in her life.

Irmalee is survived by many dear ones, her son, Robert L. Wallace, MD and daughter-in-law, Roxanne Maki, companion Norman (Bud) Smith, brother Casey and sister-in-law Dianne Jones, sister-in-law Diane (Larry) Jones, loving nieces, nephews, their families and extended family of friends.

Lee was preceded in death by dear ones, husband, Dale 'Fleck,' brothers Robert 'Bob' Buckley and Larry Jones, sister Beverly (Buckley) Stover & brother-inlaw Smokey Stover.

Honoring her wishes there will be no memorial service at this time. Memorials in Lees name may be made to Thomas County Alcohol and Drug Abuse Council (ADAC), P.O. Box 100, Colby, Kansas 67701.

Kansas primary might offer upset

Kansas and Virginia?

Is there any relationship between the coastal state where voters in the Republican primary last week rose up to smite their party's No. 2 leader in the House of Representatives, and the plains state where a virtually unknown Leawood radiologist is running against a venerable three-term incumbent U.S. senator?

Only time will tell, but the halls of the Statehouse echoed the talk last week, as reported by the Associated Press, after House Majority Leader Eric Cantor lost a Republican primary to retain his seat in Congress.

Supporters of Kansas "tea party" candidate Milton Wolf were cheered by the victory in Virginia of a largely unknown, poorly financed challenger against a top Republican leader. Roberts' backers say things are different here, however.

In Washington, Rep. Cantor was widely seen as the next speaker of the House, with Rep. John Boehner of Ohio expected to step down next year. Now, he'll likely be out of a job – and Mr. Boehner may be stuck with his.

Opponents labeled Cantor as a Washington insider who'd grown out of touch with his nearby district. His support for a compromise on immigration reform, though widely seen as necessary for the party, may have cost him at home.

Sen. Roberts' campaign says that's not him. After 18 years in the Senate and 16 before that in the House, representing the 1st District of western Kansas, they say he hasn't forgotten who sent him to Washington. He's opposed any "amnesty" for illegal immigrants, played to his conservative base and has support from groups such as the Kansas State Rifle Association and Right to Life.

He has solid backing from farm groups after years of helping craft the "Farm Bill" and serving as chair of the House Agriculture Committee and, later, the Senate Intelligence Oversight Committee.

Wolf has been running since October, however. He attacks Sen. Roberts for owning a home in Virginia while listing a rented room in Dodge City as his residence for voting purposes. The challenger claims Roberts really lives in the Washington area and seldom comes "home." In fact, he's worked in Washington since 1967, when he became an aide to Sen. Frank Carlson, later serving Rep. Keith Sebelius of Norton.

A solid record, yes, but there are many who may vote for Mr. Wolf. We've heard more than one person say on the streets of Colby that Roberts has been there "long enough." His visits out here have not been that frequent.

If money means anything, Sen. Roberts should have a big edge. The AP reported he has $2.25 million to spend compared to $278,000 for Wolf. Money meant little in Virginia, but observers point out that only 65,000 people voted in that race and five times as many are expected in Kansas, maybe more, making it harder for a determined minority to score a coup.

The senator says he's never taken his race for granted.

"In the first place, I'm not Cantor," he told the Associated Press. "This is not going to happen in Kansas."

Parting with 'treasures' can be tough

Yipes! We have stuff everywhere in this house!

The closets are stuffed. The drawers are crammed. Chairs and tables are piled high with books, magazine and newspapers. Spare beds hold suitcases and the debris of travel.

I was getting ready to go to a seminar on hoarding with my sister Marie and, after looking around the house, I was afraid I would find out that Steve and I suffered from this medical condition

I needn't have worried. While we are terrible pack rats and find it hard to discard anything we haven't read and quite a bit that we have, we aren't in any danger of becoming hoarders. Believe it or not, this really is a medical condition

Marie is a mental-health nurse, and from time to time we get together for continuingeducation seminars that will benefit both her nurses' license and my pharmacy license.

This time, I had to get the OK from the state to use the credits, and while it wasn't as pharmacy oriented as I had hoped, it certainly was eye opening.

Hoarders are people who can't let go. At all. They keep and save everything. Soon their homes are so full of stuff they can't eat in the kitchen, or even cook, because the stove, table, chair, counters and sink are full of stuff. They frequently can't sleep in their bedrooms because the bed, floor, chest of drawers and night stand are covered

And just removing their stuff doesn't solve the problem. It just hurts the patient, and they go right back to work filling their homes, apartments, yards and garages with different stuff.

Valuable items may be mixed in with the junk: Money and stock certificates in piles of c.haynes @ nwkansas.com old magazines, cereal boxes and cast-off clothing. Antiques piled with bottle caps, bubblegum wrappers and pieces of broken dishes.

Opinion

To the hoarder, it's all important. It all needs to be saved

Mostly, the presenter said, these people have to be taught to let go a little at a time. It's a long, hard process.

When I got home, I looked around. We may not be hoarders, but we could sure use some judicious culling of our "stuff."

Now if I can just find that magazine article on organizing your stuff. I know it's in one of these piles. Somewhere. On the table, the bed, the floor or the chair, I think.

On second thought, maybe, I need my sister to come over and talk me into giving up just a little of my hoard.

on a tag with that name, and we were supposed to address each other accordingly. Through the exhibit we would learn things about the person's life.

My person was a man about my same age – early 40s. He was married and had two little girls. He was a school teacher and well-liked by his students and those who knew him. He and his family were taken right at the beginning of the Holocaust to Auschwitz. His wife and two daughters were killed almost immediately. He was healthy and strong, and was not killed but was forced to work doing slave labor.

As we continued through the exhibit, my wife, my children, and I began to relate with the person whose name we had, even feeling as if we were that person. We laughed at the things the person liked, enjoyed their talents and hobbies, and learned how they lived and what their daily routines were like. As their lives took tragic turns, we could almost feel the pain with them.

At one point during our journey, there was a man who had helped put the exhibit together. He was willing to answer questions, but I saw no one taking advantage of that opportunity. I decided to take some time to visit with him.

I asked him if he had any personal experience with Holocaust. He nodded. "I was at Auschwitz. Most of my family died there, and I found myself feeling bitter and resentful, with my only thoughts being thoughts of vengeance. But then something happened. I noticed that there were prisoners there who were happy. I realized they were the ones who were able to make themselves free.'

Daris Howard Life's Outtakes

"Did they escape?" I asked.

"No. They made decisions for themselves, so that even when their liberty was taken away, their freedom was not."

"What's the difference between liberty and freedom?" I asked.

"Liberty is a person's ability to come and go as they choose. But freedom goes much deeper, and comes from within. I watched as those men, even though they had no liberty, still chose to be free.

As others could only dwell on their own personal misery, those men chose happiness. Some wrote happy stories, and some wrote inspired music, even if they wrote in nothing but the dirt on the ground or scratches on the wall. Others simply chose to help others, giving of themselves and even of their meager rations when they themselves were near starvation.

Those men chose not to let their captors determine their happiness or misery, nor their actions. Only they could determine what they would be, and they chose a positive attitude, within myself. It was not easy, and at times, when a guard was especially vicious, I could feel myself slipping back into thoughts of revenge. But when I would realize what was happening to me, I would work to force those thoughts out of my mind, even to the point I could almost forgive the unforgivable acts done by our captors."

"That seems so impossible," I said.

"It's not easy," he replied. "I don't think one in a thousand is able to find the fortitude to develop it in their lives. I know I never mastered it, but striving to that end did give me the strength and hope to endure, and I think it is what helped me to survive. And when the war was finally over, it helped me to be able to go on with my life and put what had happened behind me.

As I finished the exhibit, I learned that, after the person whose name I had was no longer of value to the Germans, he was killed. At first a feeling of animosity came over me, but then I thought about what the man had told me, and I made a determination to do as he said.

I would choose happiness and freedom.

A terrific toast to Tama Unger started another Citizen's Medical Center Foundation golf tournament that would have made the late organizational leader proud.

"It was a great turnout, more players than ever," current Director of Fund Development and Marketing director Megan Carmichael said about Friday's 4-person scramble. "We had a lot of local businesses that were sponsors and made donations, more than last year. And the tournament was in honor of Tama Unger."

Unger died last fall at age 48, leaving behind a husband, son, many relatives, friends and coworkers. She worked at Citizen's Medical Center in Colby for many years, serving as Director of Fund Development for the Citizen's Foundation.

Tama was also director of volunteers for the hospital and public information officer.

Colby trounces over Hill twice in sweep

By R.B. Headley

Colby Free Press rbheadley@nwkansas.com

If triples and inside-the-park home runs are baseball's most exciting plays, then Colby K-18 coach Travis Branum could have offered only one post-game comment Monday evening:

"Are you not entertained?"

The Legion baseball boys were snoozing early against visiting Hill City, falling behind 2-0 against a town that's just trying to ignite its K-18 baseball program.

We needed a jolt to make sure everyone was awake," Branum admitted about the slow start. The Colby team had just played three games in two days during its weekend home tournament. "I think our guys knew they (Hill City) weren't going to be an extremely tough team, and our preparation faltered a bit."

Yet after foul-smelling errorplagued half-inning, Colby's boys soon soon discovered a "buzz and jolt" phenomenon that's far more enjoyable than dodging lightning bolts.

"We had four triples and one inside-the-park home run," coach Branum said about what ignited the 17-3, 17-7 doubleheader sweep. "And tney were all legitimate, error-free plays. None were singles and a two-base error. We hit the ball really well."

Nobody was lord of the extrabase hits more often than Shevin against Norton Thursday evening. Martin.

Martin smashed a triple, another triple, and added that always memorable inside-the-park home winning home games," Branum run

Rex Branum blasted his own wins on Thursday. Losing home three-bagger to follow up a team games is a no-no.'

Machines take over for the weekend

Recipe uses new name for flour

Dear Heloise: The other day, I saw a recipe for making pizza dough, which I love to do. It used something called "00 flour." What exactly is that, and where can I find it? My local grocery stores did not have it. - M.T. in California

This 00 flour is an Italian flour. The "00" is how the ground flour is classified, with the number "00" representing the finest grind. The reason this type of flour is used in pizza dough is because of its texture, which makes it easy to work with, and because of its low gluten content. This helps make pizza crust light and soft.

If you cannot find it in your main grocery store, try a specialty grocery store, or order the flour online. - Heloise

PEELING POTATOES

Dear Heloise: I read your column every day in the (Steubenville, Ohio) Herald-Star. My hint came to me while I was peeling potatoes with a vegetable peeler, a chore I don't like to do. I retrieved my apple corer/parer from the cupboard. It's the kind you force into one end of the apple (potato, in this case) and then turn the handle and the apple (potato) is peeled. As it goes through, the core is removed.

It works great on potatoes, and an extra benefit is that the now-skinless potato is in the form of a twisty fry. I either put it in boiling water to cook for mashed potatoes, or the fry can be deepfried for a homemade treat just like at restaurants. It's fast, easy and quick to clean up. - Rose G. in Ohio

USE-BY DATE

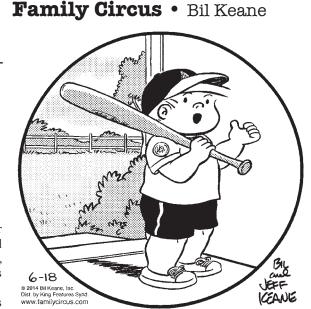

Dear Heloise: I have always wondered what a "use-by" date means. Does it mean the unopened product? If you open it, is it still good until that date? Mostly I wonder about things like vitamins and aspirin. - Carol M. in Texas

The products, opened or not, should still be good for use until the use-by date, or even after. The use-by date is set by the manufacturer, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. For best quality, it is the last day the manufacturer of the product recommends using it. However, the USDA states that this is not a safety date. If you have stored the product properly and taken care of it, then it still should be good up to and after this date. - Heloise to squeeze juice for my key lime pie: my garlic press! The small Mexican limes from my patio tree fit perfectly. I just halve the lime, pop it in the press and squeeze. I have a cup of juice in no time. My husband even uses this hint when making his vodka tonics. - Barbara N., via email

Avoiding the 800 Number

Many plays made by declarer are based on information he obtains from either the opponents' bidding or the type of defense they adopt. To place so much reliance on information volunteered by 21 "K the enemy might seem odd, but it is nevertheless sound strategy to proceed on the assumption that 22 Re they are doing their best at all times to achieve the optimal result for their side.

Consider this deal where South is in four spades doubled and the defense starts with three rounds of diamonds followed by three rounds of hearts. Declarer ruffs, cashes the ace of spades, plays a club to the king and leads a trump from dummy, East following low.

South must now resolve the question of whether to finesse or go up with the king. He is already down two -- 500 points -- and wants to avoid going for 800.

In general, when missing four to the queen of a suit, declarer plays for the queen to drop by cashing the A-K instead of taking a finesse. However, the mathematical advantage is so slight that he should feel free to make use of any and all clues that might indicate otherwise.

Here, there is a good reason to finesse. If South trusts the opponents' bidding, he must assume that their spades are divided 3-1, not 2-2. In effect, he says to himself that the opponents would not have voluntarily bid four hearts if they had four quick losers in spades and clubs.

Of course, it is possible that they did -- nobody bids perfectly all the time -- but there is a strong presumption that they did not bid themselves into a hopeless game. From this it follows that the spades are unlikely to be divided 2-2, and that finessing against the queen is the better play under the circumstances.
